THE STAGE CLOWN AND THE DEBUTANTE.

A STORY OF "BEHIND THE SCENES."

ACT I.

"One, two, three! One, two, three! One, two, three! Set together now—one, two, three!"

It was the ballet master's voice and the ballet master was drilling some hal. dozen young ladies in short skirts and long red stockings in the intricate complications of a grand pas. The great, empty theatre never looked so wretchedly dismal and dreary as it did on that chilly morning, with all the ladies and gentlemen at rehearsal, stalking about the stage in their overcoats and shawls, and stamping their feet continually upon the floor to keep them warm. At the back of the building a few windows, with their blinds thrown partially open, let down a feeble, ghastly light upon the stage, revealing the dinginess of the reversed scenery and bare rafters to such an extent that the idea of ever finding in them the material for a "palace of dew-drops" or a "fairy grotto," seemed utterly preposterous. One would have thought the place had not been used for a year, so dirty and dusty and dismal did everything appear; yet the Christmas season was at its height, and the annual pantomime was in the midst of an unusually successful run.

A number of people occupied the stage, some of them with books in their hands, some of them crossing and recrossing to places, in accordance with the stage directions. The ballet master occupied the space immediately before the footlights, and was drilling his girls to the music of a squeaky violin in the orchestra, in total disregard of the movements of those around him. The manager sat at a little table near the wings, and some half dozen ladies, wrapped in shawls, stood about in rather sleepy attitudes, waiting carelessly for their cues.

It was some what unusual to have all this going on during the run of a successful pantomime, but the evening was a sort of gala night. A young and lovely debutante, the daughter of an old French actor who had recently died, was to make her first appearance, and, in addition to the unusual bill, two acts of the "Lady of Lyons" were to precede the pantomime. Old Peter Frondat had left little to Marie except his name, her mother's beauty, and, perhaps, something of his own histrionic genius. The two former bequests would not afford her a living; so she had determined to find what the latter would do for her.

She sat this morning in the wings, apart from the others and screened from the stage by the portal to a feudal castle which had got somehow into incongruous proximity to an Egyptian pyramid, and the upper portion of a mountain pass in Andalusia. Her only company in this little canvas bower was the clown, and she had been talking with him earnestly.

"I won't, I won't," she said. "This must be stopped, Edward, for your own sake as well as mine. I don't love you, I can't love you, and I never could learn to make you happy. You are cruel to talk to me about this thing at such a time. Don't I need all the nerve I've got to go through with to-night's trial? I should think that you would know better."

"I drifted into it," said the clown, humbly. "I never meant to speak to you about it again. But remember, Marie, I have loved you so long! I never thought that any one could take the place of my little lost Jennie, until your father came to me for help in giving you instruction for the stage. I found you so good, so beautiful, so different from other girls! It wasn't strange that your tutor should fall in love with you, was it, Marie?"

"I think it was," she said. "I don't see what there was to fall in love with. Besides, you are so much older than I. Why, I used to sit in your lap before I was big enough to bring costumes to the theatre."

"Yes, I know," he said, "there are fourteen years between us. I have been a fool to think of winning you at all. After to-night, a still broader gulf will separate us, for you will succeed, Marie. I know it. The proudest place in the profession will be within your reach."

She was silent a moment. Then she said quietly:—

"Well, won't you be glad of it?"

"Indeed, indeed I shall!" he replied earnestly. "I would give half the years of my life to see it. I would have been content to take you as my wife, even though you were sure the little girl still bringing costumes to the theatre, for a room. Since that is not to be, I shall be proud of the day when dukes and earls shall bend at your feet. You need not smile, Marie; such things have been before now."

"You good Edward," she said, taking his hand in both of her own, "I shall never forget what I owe to you, nevertheless. Should such a day ever come, it will make me more proud to think I should not be young. Success would make me ambitious. I would not be contented as the wife of a poor clown, unless I loved you more than I think I do now. If I fail, I should disappoint you. You would not care for me then."

He would have answered that assertion quickly, but the interview was suddenly interrupted at that moment by a red haired boy, who put his head around a corner of the feudal castle, exclaiming, "Now, then!" and immediately disappeared.

Marie had no sooner left the side of the clown in answer to the summons, than her place was taken by one of the ballet dancers—a slight, dark-eyed girl, dressed, like her sisters practising upon the stage, in coarse, short petticoats, and long, woolen stockings of fiery red.

"So!" she said, stopping before him and curling her pretty lip contemptuously, "you are in love with our grand lady, are you?"

Edward darted a frightened look at her.

"Have you been listening?" he asked.

"Bah! Why should I take the trouble? Her silly gabble isn't worth listening to, I'm sure. Only when folks select such queer times and places for their love making, they ought to remember that canvas walls arn't so solid as they appear. Do you know why Marie Frondat won't marry you, Edward Steele?"

"She does not love me," said the clown, simply.

"Stuff! She doesn't know what love is—but that's not it. She won't have you because you are a clown, that's all. She has fine ideas in her head, and you have yourself to blame for it, partly. She forgets that you filled, and can still fill, higher roles than the ones you have been playing lately. She forgets that it was the loss of your voice which brought you from your legitimate line down to the position you occupy now. She forgets that she has never been anything better than a dresser all her life. There's no merit in her name and beauty, but she doesn't think of that. It's pride, Edward Steele, pride, and nothing else."

"She has genius," said Steele. "Her dreams may be fulfilled."

"Never! Listen to me; I hate that woman with all my heart and soul. A man whom I have loved better than my own life has been seduced by her cursed beauty—for she is beautiful—and her false smiles. He left me under circumstances hardest of all for a woman to bear—did me a wrong hardest of all wrongs for a woman to forgive. After she had won him from me she turned him adrift. I would not receive him back; she would have nothing to do with him. But that is neither here nor there. It was she who took my love away from me, and I hate her. There is nothing I would not do to compass her ruin, and I will cause her utter failure to-night if it be in my power to do it. I am only a ballet girl, but even such as I have feelings and hearts which can be hurt."

"Ninette! Ninette! How can you cause her failure?"

The girl smiled and her black eyes glittered.

"Do you know who plays Meinotte to her Pauline?"

"Yes, certainly. It is Harcourt."

"And would you know who is the man of whom I have spoken?"

"Not Harcourt, surely."

"The same. You need not look so surprised. Such great actors fall in love with very common people sometimes. This one grew fond of a dancer, and then of a rossing girl. Harcourt will not play Claude Meinotte to-night."

"He is on the stage at this moment with Marie."

"True, but he will not be on hand to-night when he is needed."

"What do you mean?" asked Steele, wondering. "Is this some plot against Marie?"

"Perhaps so," she said, smiling bitterly. "I shall not be surprised if Mr. Harcourt becomes too tipsy to make his appearance when the curtain is rung up to-night. You know his failing. If you were not a fool you would wish me success."

"Ninette, you are mad. If you are telling the truth, it is my duty to report all this. Marie must not fail."

She placed her hand upon his arm and said, quietly:—

"If Marie Frondat succeeds to-night she is lost to you for ever. She has told you as much already. Should she fail, that accepted pride will be broken. Then, perhaps, she will look with better favor upon your suit. Help us, then, for your own sake, for Marie's sake, for my sake."

A look of great trouble came into the clown's face. All that Ninette said was true. Marie's failure might insure the fulfilment of the cherished dream of his life. If she did not succeed to-night she would never attempt the stage again. But he could not lend himself to so despicable a plot as this against her, if it would give him the eventual possession of her love. He was not so base as that. Yet, while he was determined that Marie should succeed in spite of Ninette, he deemed it best to dissemble before her. No warning from him to Harcourt would avail against Ninette's pretty blandishments; he knew that well enough. Neither had he the courage to bring upon him the hatred of his fellow players by reporting the conspiracy to the manager. So, for the present, he deemed it best to lull Ninette into security even while he pitied himself against her. This, at least, he would do, through his love for Marie.

"You are right," he said, "but it seems cruel to blight a flower of such fair promise before it has time to unfold. Besides, is there no one besides Harcourt who is up in Meinotte?"

"Not a soul. You ought to know that as well as I. Old Beamish will waft curtain until half-past eight. Harcourt won't come, and it will then be too late to change the play. Consequence, pantomime as usual. I'm a fool for telling you all this; but, from what I overheard just now, I thought you would be willing to help me."

"No," said Steele, "I won't lift a finger to help you, Ninette; but I'll keep your secret. I won't betray you. Manage the affair as you like; but don't ask me for my assistance."

"You will promise to say nothing?" she asked, turning her dark eyes upon him suspiciously.

"I promise solemnly," he said, with a forced grimace.

"What an idiot I am!" exclaimed Ninette, turning upon her heel, "to be babbling such things so near the stage. Now, then, remember! Not a word!"

She placed her finger on her lips and withdrew, while the clown went up stairs after a certain yellow covered book, which he took home to study diligently for the rest of the day.

ACT II.

At the hour for the commencement of the performance that evening the theatre was filled to its utmost capacity. From parquet to dome a crowd of expectant people eagerly awaited the rising of the curtain. The dress circle, brilliant with costly toilets, blooming with beautiful women, was alive with the flutter of hundreds of fans and the rustle of silken robes. The sparkle of diamonds and the perfume of bouquets lent their aid to the enchantment of the scene and the murmur of many voices filled the air with a languid drone. A certain measure of romance in the history of this unknown daughter of Peter Frondat had given to her debut a degree of interest which brought half the elite of the great city to witness her failure or success. Her appearance had been well managed. Discreet and judicious advertising, editorial notices of the marked evidences of her genius, careful "cooking" of the public ear, all that could be done in her behalf to bring theatre-goers to the box office, had been done by her two best friends, Steele and Beamish, the manager. The result, thus far, more than justified their hopes and expectations. Whether their endeavors were destined to be rewarded by her success to-night an hour or more at the most would certainly prove.

Eight o'clock arrived. The orchestra finished the overture and stopped. There was no bell for the curtain, and the audience waited with some impatience. In a few moments the leader began to distribute music to his musicians, and a supplementary piece of lively dance music was played to keep the house in good humor. Still no curtain. The parquet began to get somewhat noisy, and the dress circle murmured its disapprobation of the delay. Thus, at a quarter past the hour, stood matters before the curtain. Behind it a somewhat different scene was presented.

The green-room was filled with people dressed, ready for their parts; some rushing about with an appearance of considerable excitement, some conversing earnestly together, some laughing at Marie's unhappy predicament. The manager was nearly in a state of apoplexy. The overture was done. The impatience manifested by the audience was becoming only too audible. Still Harcourt did not make his appearance. Marie, in her dressing room, sat trembling with excitement and rougeing to extremes to hide the ashy pallor of her cheeks. Steele, who had made his appearance in the green-room much earlier than necessary, as he was only cast in the pantomime, sat in one corner poring over the leaves of his yellow book. Twenty minutes past, and still no Meinotte.

"What the devil's to be done?" cried Beamish, fuming in desperation. "I'll give him ten minutes more, and if he don't come then I shall have to set the stage for the pantomime. Too bad, too bad!"

He drew on a pair of white kids and went before the curtain to pacify the people, explaining the cause of delay, and asking their kind consideration for a few minutes longer. When he returned to the green-room he found Marie there. Harcourt had not come. The clown put his yellow book in his pocket and came forward from his corner.

"I will undertake to play Claude," he said quietly, "since Harcourt is delinquent."

"You?" exclaimed the manager, in astonishment. "Why—why—bless my soul?"

"Marie must not fail," said Steele. "For her sake I will do the best I can. There are but two acts. I think I can command my voice for an hour at least, if you are disposed to take the risk."

"But you—you aren't up in it, are you?"

"I played the part once or twice some years ago," replied the clown. "If I'm well followed I think I can do it."

"God bless you, my dear fellow," cried Beamish, taking his hand impulsively. "If you succeed I will be your debtor for life. Go on and try."

During the few moments occupied by Steele in dressing the part Beamish again went before the curtain, partly to occupy the attention of the people, partly to request their indulgence for the performer who had undertaken the role on so short notice. Then the stage was cleared, the bell rang and to the satisfaction of everybody the play commenced.

It will be hardly necessary to recite the details of the wonderful performance. Everybody said that such a rendition of the parts of Claude and Pauline had not been given upon those boards for very many a long year. Steele, gaining confidence as he warmed to the work before him, threw into the character all the earnestness and fervor of which he was capable. His love for Pauline was not the love of Meinotte—it was the love of Edward Steele for Marie Frondat. His very soul seemed to look out from his eyes as he repeated the tender, well worn passages, and gave a new meaning to their hackneyed intonations. His lost voice returned to him and rang out clear and sonorous, or anon fell into sweet cadences of exquisite tenderness. Marie, stimulated, encouraged, sustained by his example, more than fulfilled the expectations of her friend. The whole house rang with plaudits. Beamish, standing anxiously in the wings, was beside himself with delight. Three times was the fair debutante called before the curtain, each time to be pelted with bouquets, which more than filled the arms of the happy Claude, who came forward with her to receive his share of the general approbation.

The sustained excitement was too much for Marie. When all was done she fainted away in the arms of the faithful Steele, on her way to her dressing room. It was, perhaps, well for him that she should be taken home in a carriage as soon as she recovered her senses. He could hardly have done justice to his nonsense in the pantomime had she remained in the theatre that night. Ninette, in a bewildering demi-costume of gauze and spangles, made her appearance soon after Marie had gone home.

"I'll be even with you for this," she kissed in Edward's ear. "You'd better finish your job now by getting Harcourt sober again. He's at my house drunk as a fiddler."

She turned away and was lost in the harlequin crowd upon the stage—a fairy queen, with all the ancestral malignity of her sisterhood in her blue veins.

ACT III.

The next morning Edward called upon Marie. He found her at her lodging, a poorly furnished apartment off one of the upper floors of a house in a retired part of the city.

She lay upon a lounge at the farther side of the room as he entered, but rose instantly to meet him. Before he could prevent her she had twined her arms about his neck and kissed him. It was a little thing, which would have been scandalous in some women. Somehow it did not seem bold in Marie.

"It is you who saved me," she cried, impulsively. "Ninette has been here, and I know everything. I thought you were good last night. Now I know that you are noble."

He smiled and unwound her arms tenderly.

"It was nothing," he said. "I could not bear that my pupil should fall when I had done so much already to have her succeed. My own pride was at stake, you know."

"And you studied the part all day," she said, "because you knew just what would take place at night. Oh, how can I ever thank you enough for it?"

"Hush!" he said, taking a seat on the sofa beside her. "A brilliant career is before you, Marie. Make the best now of your golden opportunity. If I mistake not, we shall yet have the earl and the marquis at your feet, as I have prophesied."

She turned her blue eyes full upon him with a look which he could hardly have mistaken had he dreamed of a possibility of its being there. As it was, he did not heed it.

"I care nothing for that," she replied. "I shall be quite content with a much more humble suitor than either a marquis or an earl."

"Anything," he said, laughing, "but a clown in a pantomime."

"I did not say that."

"Never mind, Marie. I will try to forget my idle dreams. Still it would have made me very happy could they ever have been fulfilled."

She was silent a moment, idly tracing with one little finger the pattern upon the sofa-covering. Then she said, quietly:—

"You do not know but they may come true yet."

He seized her hand earnestly and tried to look into her downcast eyes, trembling lest he had mistaken her words.

"Marie!" he exclaimed, "you do not mean—that after all—"

"I mean," she said, placing both her hands in his, "that if you will take me for your wife, Edward, in payment for your goodness to me, you will make me very, very happy. I have loved you all my life, I think, but I never knew it until last night."

"And I, capering clown!" he said, "O Marie! how could you?"

"I thought last night," she replied, smiling, "that if the clown could in a play make love so well, how excellently would he be able to do it in reality!"

WHITE AND BLACK;
Or, Argumentum Ad Hominem.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY CAPT. ED. GRANGER.

The following ludicrous occurrence took place at Port Hudson during the siege which rendered it famous in the late war. Our regiment lay behind the entrenchments, on our right was an Irish regiment and on our left the "Native Guard," a regiment composed exclusively of "freedmen," or plantation negroes.

The boys from the Emerald Isle did not "cotton," so to speak, to their ebony hued brethren from "far off Afric's shore," though there was an exception to this rule, as well as to all other rules under the sun. Teddy O'Rourke and Scipio Skipper, the former a jolly, rollicking son of Erin, and the latter a thick-lipped, charcoal complexioned child of misfortune, were on the most intimate footing. Whenever a cessation of shelling our lines by the enemy allowed it, they were almost invariably in company.

On one occasion, observing a group of whites and blacks mixed indiscriminately together, I sauntered that way out of curiosity, to see what was going on. I discovered the attraction to be an argument between Skipper and O'Rourke as to the relative merits of the Irishman versus the African. As I came up they were about prepared to submit the question of superiority to the test of comparing names.

"Now, Misther Skipper," said O'Rourke, with dignified gravity, as if a weighty responsibility rested upon his shoulders, "we'll be aither sound or fury. I don't like to stir up confusion, though it's meself houlds the opinion—barrin' your prisince—it's a disgrace intirely to compare an Irishman wid a nagur."

"What dat, Mistah Ohruke?" indignantly responded the black man. "What dat you say? Dis argriment mus' stop; yes, sah, continyer whar it am, 'less you 'dress dis individual by de rite name. Nagur! I scorn wid importation de name!"

This outburst of native eloquence elicited a burst of admiration from the blacks.

The Irishman, not at all abashed at this reprimand, continued:—"Will yees piase to name a counthryman of yer own that can equal in any respect the bould Duke of Wellington, be jabers?"

"Sah?" replied the African, pompously. "Dis chile hab de feriliety to name a gyarter, de distinguished, de immortabul Napoleon Bonyparte!"

The announcement of this familiar name created no little sensation among the dusky portion of the auditorium, while many of the others received it with shouts of derisive laughter.

"An', be the howly Quakers, that's the first I know'd he was a nagur. But divil the care do I care so long as the Duke bate him. Now equal Dan O'Connell if yees can."

"Ise name as a set off to dat ar, George Washington, de father ob de brack race."

"May the ould boy bur-r-r-n ye! Washington was no nagur, yer black spalpeen. Yer'll be afther naming some Irishman yet, an' if yer do it's meself'll brake ivery bone in your black body."

"What dat? Washington not a cullored pusson? You are 'staken, sah—'staken! What fur de orack folks name de piecaninnies arter him if he no brack? I'se tell you, sah, he were a brack man, an' a Virginia nigger at dat," triumphantly responded Skip.

"Well, thin, if he wur a nagur, you've mintioned a kupple of dacent men intirely. But it's meself'll be afther giving yees a throoblesum name to match this time," said O'Rourke. "Stan' up, ivery mither's son of ye—hat's off! Stop grinning, yer black monkeys, or I'll be afther taching yees dacency—mind that now! Now, Misther Skipper," said he, turning to that worthy, "I mintion wid riverence the blessed name of Saint Patthrick!"

The Irishmen looked as if they expected that the mere announcement of that talismanic name would carry consternation into the ranks of the blacks and cause them to surrender the question in dispute without another word.

But the negroes didn't see it in that light, especially Skipper, who immediately answered:—"When you cum fer saints I'se to hum dar, an' no mistake. I'se kin mention brack saints for ebbery day in the year. De fust name I'se give yer to chaw on am Saint Jewdas Iscarriot."

The blacks exhibited their admiration at the sagacity of their champion by a liberal display of ivory, while the others looked on in blank consternation, as if their spokesman couldn't extricate them from the dilemma of acknowledging that such a being ever existed as a black or "nagur!" Saint.

"May the everlasting fires burn ye! Divil a saint ever lived 'cept he war an Irishman. An' it's an O'Rourke, of the O'Rourkes of Enniskillen town, county of Permarragh, that'll wipe out the disgrace with the heart's blood of every black spalpeen in the camp."

And, suiting the action to the word, he rushed towards the unfortunate blacks, followed by a score of countrymen of his, yelling like so many Indians. In the confusion, thinking discretion the better part of valor, took to their heels and rushed pell-mell toward their own quarters. The excitement consequent upon the stampede and the pursuit aroused the entire line. The greater part of the Irish regiment, although ignorant of the cause, joined in the chase and added their lusty yells to the tumult. Our regiment was immediately ordered to "fall in." If bloodshed was to be prevented our boys must do the work. Just as our guns were brought to the position of "charge bayonets" a ——read of fire was suddenly discovered out inland against the —— ght sky, and in an instant a shell exploded in close proximity to the contending factions. In a few minutes the enemy were vigorously shelling our lines, and the boys were glad to seek shelter in the trenches. Probably the yelling on our side had aroused their curiosity, which caused them to forward their compliments in the shape of shells. We presume, however, that they were not aware of their instrumentality in a yelling what promised to be a serious outbreak.

CARIOLIE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,

BY ELSIE MAY.

Like a fair rose tree flushing with pride,
Lovingly drooping o'er the lake side;
Like the bird carols in early spring,
As of the summer softly they sing,
Like the dream angels hear us at even,
Flinging their pinions from earth and heaven;
Like all things lovely, glorious to me,
Was thy love's seeming, Cariolie.

Yet rarest roses o'er graves may bloom;
Bird songs oft omen night, death and gloom;
Dream conceived perfume rise and depart,
Cost no dew incense over the heart.
Thus thine affection shone with false gleam,
Pilfing thine emblem, rose, bird and dream;
While I believed then true but to me,
Thou wast a traitress, Cariolie.

"Ise name as a set off to dat ar, George Washington, de father ob de brack race."

"May the ould boy bur-r-r-n ye! Washington was no nagur, yer black spalpeen. Yer'll be afther naming some Irishman yet, an' if yer do it's meself'll brake ivery bone in your black body."

"What dat? Washington not a cullored pusson? You are 'staken, sah—'staken! What fur de orack folks name de piecaninnies arter him if he no brack? I'se tell you, sah, he were a brack man, an' a Virginia nigger at dat," triumphantly responded Skip.

"Well, thin, if he wur a nagur, you've mintioned a kupple of dacent men intirely. But it's meself'll be afther giving yees a throoblesum name to match this time," said O'Rourke. "Stan' up, ivery mither's son of ye—hat's off! Stop grinning, yer black monkeys, or I'll be afther taching yees dacency—mind that now! Now, Misther Skipper," said he, turning to that worthy, "I mintion wid riverence the blessed name of Saint Patthrick!"

The Irishmen looked as if they expected that the mere announcement of that talismanic name would carry consternation into the ranks of the blacks and cause them to surrender the question in dispute without another word.

But the negroes didn't see it in that light, especially Skipper, who immediately answered:—"When you cum fer saints I'se to hum dar, an' no mistake. I'se kin mention brack saints for ebbery day in the year. De fust name I'se give yer to chaw on am Saint Jewdas Iscarriot."

The blacks exhibited their admiration at the sagacity of their champion by a liberal display of ivory, while the others looked on in blank consternation, as if their spokesman couldn't extricate them from the dilemma of acknowledging that such a being ever existed as a black or "nagur!" Saint.

"May the everlasting fires burn ye! Divil a saint ever lived 'cept he war an Irishman. An' it's an O'Rourke, of the O'Rourkes of Enniskillen town, county of Permarragh, that'll wipe out the disgrace with the heart's blood of every black spalpeen in the camp."

And, suiting the action to the word, he rushed towards the unfortunate blacks, followed by a score of countrymen of his, yelling like so many Indians. In the confusion, thinking discretion the better part of valor, took to their heels and rushed pell-mell toward their own quarters. The excitement consequent upon the stampede and the pursuit aroused the entire line. The greater part of the Irish regiment, although ignorant of the cause, joined in the chase and added their lusty yells to the tumult. Our regiment was immediately ordered to "fall in." If bloodshed was to be prevented our boys must do the work. Just as our guns were brought to the position of "charge bayonets" a ——read of fire was suddenly discovered out inland against the —— ght sky, and in an instant a shell exploded in close proximity to the contending factions. In a few minutes the enemy were vigorously shelling our lines, and the boys were glad to seek shelter in the trenches. Probably the yelling on our side had aroused their curiosity, which caused them to forward their compliments in the shape of shells. We presume, however, that they were not aware of their instrumentality in a yelling what promised to be a serious outbreak.

A DOUBLE BABY.

Extraordinary Freak of Nature.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, writing from Delaware, Ohio, Oct. 19th, relates this marvelous story:—

Our community is much excited over a freak of nature in the production of a double baby. The Siamese twins are completely overshadowed by this infant wonder. There is living in Peru township, Morrow county, a family named Finley. Up to last Wednesday morning it consisted of Mr. Joseph Finley, his wife Mary, and two children, little girls, aged three and five years. On that morning Mrs. Finley was confined and gave birth to twins, joined together in a manner unknown to the books. When the gossips brought the news of the event to our city, and gave descriptions of the child, or rather children, it was laughed at by the professional, and pronounced a good hoax. A gentleman living in the vicinity of the Finley home, called on one of our physicians and assured him that there was no exaggeration in the description, as he had seen the wonder. Convinced that there was something in the case, a party of gentlemen, consisting of Drs. J. A. Little and T. B. Williams, W. O. Seamens, Professor of Natural History and Chemistry in the Ohio Wesleyan University, and S. K. Donovan, on the 16th inst., visited the family. Before reaching the Finley farm the party called on Dr. A. R. Westbrook, of Ashley, who had been called to attend the mother, and learned from him that half had not been told. Dr. Westbrook accompanied the party. An hour's drive brought them to the place. On going to the gate leading to the yard, a written notice was discoved announcing that visitors would not be admitted. This did not deter the party. They immediately entered the yard, and on reaching the front door of the dwelling, they were met by Mr. Finley (the father) and a gentleman who appeared to be acting as an aid-de-camp, who informed the party that they could be admitted to see the show on the payment of twenty-five cents each. The Professor promptly forked over, and the party stepped in. in a few minutes the nurse made her appearance with the wonder. A double child was exhibited. Two perfectly formed heads, one on either side of the spinal column.

To give a clear idea of it, just suppose that you sever the bodies of two men at the lower part of the abdomen and then put the two upper parts together, and you have the trunk of this child. At the instance of Drs. Williams and Little, the clothing was taken from it and a critical examination was made, so far as could be without doing injury. From the occiput of one child to the occiput of the other there is a continuous spine, in a direct line. Upon one side, and directly in the centre of the trunk, were perfectly developed hips, thighs, legs and feet. They are in nice proportion to the body of either child. On the opposite side there is one large, imperfectly formed leg, presenting the appearance of the consolidation of two legs. There are eight toes on this limb, two of which have the appearance of great toes, being much larger than the others. Each has a well formed head, good features, good chest, good arms and hands, lung, heart, liver and stomach. The lower portion of the bowels, the bladder and perhaps the kidneys, are in common. All the other organs are separate.

There was but one umbilical cord and one placenta. The length of the body is twenty inches, and the umbilicus is central in the abdomen, and equi-distant from each head. It nurses well, and, when first exhibited to the party, one child was asleep and the other was crying. While the physicians were making their examination, both cried, but, a few moments after, the one which was crying first went to sleep, while the other remained awake. When either head would cry, the perfect leg which was nearest that head kicked and drew up, while the leg nearest the other head remained quiet. When either cried, the toes on the imperfect foot would move, but the limb remained stationary. Both heads nurse well, and the child, or rather children, are in excellent health. The physicians could see no reason why it, or they, should not live. The mother is doing well.

Mr. Finley is alive to the importance and value of this addition to his family. He is now charging gate money, and he informed the writer that he had already entered into an article of agreement with a showman for the sale of the body if it should die. Price fixed is $10,000. Negotiations are in progress for the exhibition if it lives. He is convinced that there is money in it, dead or alive, but thinks there is most in the latter condition. He says that he is conscious of the fact that he is "in an unlarned man, but has sense enough not to be footed out of it."

THE GUNNER'S BOY AND THE SHARK.

Our noble ship lay at anchor in the bay of Tangier, a fortified city in the extreme northwest point of Africa. The day had been extremely sultry, with a gentle breeze sweeping in from the northward and westward, but towards the close of the afternoon the sea breeze died away, and one of those sultry, oven-like atmospheric breathings came up from the sun-burnt Sahara. Half an hour before sundown the captain gave the cheering order for the boat-swain to "call all hands to go in a swimming," and in less than five minutes the forms of our hardy tars were seen leaping from the gangways, the ports, the nettings, the bowsprits, and some of the more venturesome took their plunge from the arms of the lower yards. One of the standing sails had been lowered (as is the usual custom) into the water, with its corners suspended from the main yard arm and the swinging boom, and into this most of the swimmers made their way. Among those who seemed to be enjoying the sport most were two of the boys, Tim Wallace and Fred. Fairbanks, the latter of whom was the son of our old gunner, and in a laughing mood they started out from the studding sail on a race. There was a loud, ringing shout of joy upon their lips as they put off, and they darted through the water like fishes. The surface of the sea was as smooth as glass, though its bosom rose in long, heavy swells that set in from the broad Atlantic. The ship was moored with a long sweep upon both cables, and the buoy of the starboard anchor was far away on the starboard quarter, where it rose and fell with the lazy swells, like a drunken man. Towards this buoy the two lads made their way. Fred. Fairbanks taking the lead; but when they were within about a dozen fathoms of the buoy Tim shot ahead and promised to win the race. The old gunner had watched the progress of his son with a vast degree of pride, and when he saw him dropping behind he leaped upon the poop, and was just upon urging him on by a shout, when a cry reached his ears that made him start, as though he had been struck by a cannon ball. "A shark! A shark!" came from the captain of the forecastle, and at the sound of these terrible words the men who were in the water leaped and plunged towards the ship. Right abeam, at a distance of three or four cables' length, a sharp wake was seen in the water, where the back fin of the monster was visible. His course was for the boys! For a moment the poor gunner stood like one bereft of sense, but the next he shouted at the top of his voice for his boy to turn, but the boy heard him not; stoutly the two boys strove for the goal, all unconscious of the bloody death-spirit which hovered so near them. Their merry laugh still rang out over the waters, and at length they both reached the buoy together. Terrible drops of agony started from the gunner's brow! A boat had put off, but Fairbanks knew that it could not reach his son in season, for the shark was too near its intended victims; and every moment he expected to see it sink from sight—then he knew all hope would be gone. At this moment a cry reached the ship that went through every heart like a stream of scorching fire—the boys had discovered their enemy! That cry startled old Fairbanks to his senses, and quicker than thought he sprang to the quarter deck. The guns were loaded, and none knew their temper better than he. With a steady hand, made strong by a sudden hope, the old gunner seized a priming wire and pricked the cartridge of one of the quarter guns; then he took from his pocket a percussion wafer and set it in its place, and set back the hammer of the patent lock. With a giant's strength the old man swayed the breech of the heavy gun to its bearing, and then, seizing the string of the lock, he stood back and watched for the next swell that should bring the shark within range. He had aimed the piece some distance ahead of his mark. But a single moment would settle his hopes or his fears. Every breath was hushed, and every heart in that old ship was painfully still. The boat was yet at some distance from the boys, while the horrible sea monster was frightfully near. Suddenly was heard the roar of the heavy gun, and as the old man knew that his shot was gone he sank back upon the combings of the hatch and buried his face in his hands, as if afraid to see the result of his own effort, for if he failed he knew his boy was lost! For a moment after the report of the gun had died away upon the air there was a dead silence, but as the impenetrable smoke arose from the surface of the water, there was, at first, a low murmur breaking from the lips of the men; that murmur grew louder and stronger, until it swelled to a joyous, deafening shout. The old gunner sprang to his feet and gazed off upon the water, and the first thing that met his view was the large carcase of the shark, floating with its white belly uppermost—a mangled, lifeless mass. In a few moments the boat had reached the daring swimmers, and, half dead from fright, they were brought on board. The old man clasped his boy in his arms, and then, overcome by the powerful excitement, he leaned back upon his gun for support. We have seen men in all phases of excitement and suspense; but never have we seen three hundred human beings more overcome by thrilling emotion than on that startling moment when first we knew the effect of our gunner's shot.

THE VULGARITY OF AFFECTATION.—How subjects are more nearly allied than vulgarity and affectation. It may be said of them truly that "thin partitions do their bounds divide." There cannot be a surer proof of an innate meanness of disposition, than to be always talking and thinking of being genteel. We must have a strong tendency to that which we are always trying to avoid: whenever we pretend, on all occasions, a mighty contempt for anything, it is a pretty clear sign that we feel ourselves very nearly on a level with it.

A PRACTICAL GENIUS.—A genius by the name of Jeremiah Cory, of Holden, Mo., has recently taken out a very novel patent. The invention consists in so combining and arranging a poultry roost with the gates of one or more beehives that the perching of the poultry upon the roost will serve to automatically close the hives. The object is to insure the closing of the hives at night, so as to exclude the bee-moth, and the opening of the same in the morning, to permit the passage of the bees in and out during the day

CUBLO.—Miss Ellen Tree was born in London, Eng., Dec., 1806. Made her début Sept. 23d, 1826, at Drury Lane Theatre, as Donna Violante, in the "Wonder." First appeared on the American stage at the Park Theatre, New York, as Rosalind, in "As You Like It," Sept. 1836. First appeared in Boston, Feb. 20th, 1837, as Julia, in the "Hunchback." She married Charles Kean, and always played with him up to the time of his death, and is now living in retirement in London, Eng.

ATHLETIC, Philad'a.—The moment the striker hits a dead ball, the batsman leaving becomes the player running the bases, and the striker is the only man of the two who can be put out. Before hitting a ball to the field the striker can be put out on fair balls, or three strikes, or on fouls by catches; but after striking the third time, the substitute or the man touched or put out in running to his base, and not the striker.

JOHN H. WASHBURNE, St. Louis.—There can be no question as to the superiority of the game between the Empires and Reds over that of the Mutual and Empire. A score of 7 to 5 is close and exciting, while a score of 46 to 11 shows quite the reverse. The larger the score the poorer the fielding, and skilful fielding is the best criterion of good ball playing.

TURNER, Troy.—1. The convention did nothing of the kind. They could not even take cognizance of it, as it did not come up before them through the report of the judiciary committee, the only way in which disputes between clubs can come up for action before the convention. 2. No.

SUB, Chicago.—The Chicago nine have lost eight games this season, including two series of games. They were defeated by the Atlantics, Athletics, twice; Mutuals, twice; Forest City, of Rockford, Harvard and Hayemakers. They did not vote the Fort Wayne game.

HONEY, Phila.—All travelling exhibitions, at which money is received for admission, except works of art, require a license in United States license and a local license in the town in which you exhibit. For the former you apply at the Internal Revenue Office, and the latter to the city clerk of the town where you exhibit.

HARRY WOOD, Boston.—The "Athletic" gymnasium treatises on training for every description of athletic sports, and a large portion is devoted to gymnastics, the various exercises being illustrated with correct cuts. You can procure a copy by inclosing $2.50, with your address, to the publishers, whose card is in our columns.

JOHN L. K., Canajoharie, N. Y.—Guess you're laboring under a hallucination, as the fastest running time for 100 yards is 9¼ seconds, whereas you say you walked that distance in 10 seconds. Your statements are equally absurd—you could not run that distance given in the time mentioned.

W. HILL, Kingstown, Ind.—We beg to inform you, and all others who may make similar inquiries, that we have ceased to reply to questions touching upon the relative skill of ball players in this column. It is a mere matter of opinion, and your judgment is as good, probably, as ours.

T. M., Caneyville, Ill.—London, three millions and a quarter; Liverpool, about five hundred thousand; Manchester, about four hundred thousand; Birmingham, about three hundred and fifty thousand. The above are the largest towns in England, but they are not all cities.

The preceding figures cannot be taken as precisely correct, as authentic government census returns have not yet been published.

SILVER-UP, Allegheny, Pa.—You—having but one point to make and your opponent two points—go out first on your low; the cards remain as follows:—ace, high, and game. Your opponent, in turning up Jack for trump, and held high besides, then he would have been out first.

MAUDE.—1. It is not probable that W. Horace Lingard will appear in this city during the present season. 2. Miss Fanny Davenport mentioned in past issue as playing at Trimble's Varieties, Pittsburgh, is in no way related to Miss Fanny Davenport, of the Fifth Avenue Theatre.

ATHLETIC, Athens, N. Y.—1. The bet holds good, as the change did not give either yacht an advantage over the other. 2. After the wager having been once decided and the money given up, such decision must be abided by, though, of course, it would be recoverable by law.

DESPERADO READER.—One entertainment has already taken place, but we are not in the dark as to the number that took part in the revels. Perhaps we shall be able to give you the desired intelligence in our next. A second entertainment is to take place on Nov. 8th and a third on Nov. 15th.

BROADWAY.—The horse is entered in the bona fide owner's name, he is clearly entitled to the purse if he wins it. It is not necessary that the entry should be made personally by the owner. The latter, by starting his horses, endorses the bona fide character of his entry.

J. C. B.—She fouled two or three times in that race, but with which yacht or yachts we do not remember. The fouls were of no consequence, however, and did not materially affect the result, if at all.

TURKS, Canton, O.—1. Sayers and Mace were never opponents in the ring. 2. A mile has never been run by a horse in 1 minute 30 seconds. The fastest even mile time here is 1:43¼, by Judge Curtis.

C. M. F., Albany, Ga.—Flora Temple has two foals, a three year old and a two year old. Neither of them have yet shown in public, and it is thought is so for other time, as their owner is opposed to the early training of trotting colts.

J. A., Philadelphia.—There has been no such curiosity on exhibition as a rooster with a human face. You have evidently confounded it with the headless rooster which was on exhibition until the authorities stopped it.

C. S., Detroit, Mich.—1. Order the "patent bones" through the clerk of the music store who told you of them. 2. Send to Ed. James, publishing bureau, as per advertisement in this issue, for book on clog dancing.

C. W. Y., Rochester.—A horse breaking on or near the score does not lose the heat, if he does not gain by so breaking. 2. The same party.

HENRY CITY.—Glenelg beat Helmbold in a three mile race at Jerome Park. He also beat him in a two mile heat race at Baltimore last week.

F. D. O., Litchfield, Ill.—Yes, in the case of balls, if the first ball delivered is made off the striker. In the case of strikes the first ball must be fair.

FAIR PLAY.—They are merely practice games. The Mutuals and Athletics have played the only regular series between them, and the Athletics lost.

D. B. P., Worcester.—The Reds beat the Mutuals 4 to 2 in their first game in 1869. It was this game which led to the introduction of the dead ball.

MUTUAL, New York.—The game was played through from the first to the third inning, the Mutuals scoring nine runs and the White Stockings nine blanks.

CAPTAIN TUTTLE AND BARLEY.—If you do not take notice of cha l lenges through the press, the card you send us had better be sent to the other club by other means than the press.

BUSY CORNER, Philadelphia.—1. We cannot give you that information correctly. Better inquire of the party mentioned. 2. Sayers was 5 feet 8½ inches in height.

A. H. K., Quincy.—We do not issue cards. Your items of the 27th are used; those of the 11th are out of date. We should advise a little more care in posting up items.

WILL THERE BE A FIGHT?

On Tuesday next, November 8th, an election for Governor, Controller, Sheriff, Mayor, Congressmen, etc., is to take place in this State, and considerable uneasiness has prevailed concerning the operation of the new election law in this city. To these living in other cities, the revelations making by our daily press, touching the various candidates and their supporters, must have a very bad cook; the supervisors of election chosen by the U. S. Marshal are set down as an assemblage of cut-throats, burglars, thieves, and other criminals of high and low degree. All this must be very interesting to strangers, and cannot but lead to the inference that the governing and controlling classes of this city are composed of the most depraved and reckless characters, of desperadoes who would not hesitate to take a man's life for a ten dollar bill, of incendiaries who would lay in ruins the property of those who are inimical to the interests of such people. All these developments are made daily through the medium of the "respectable press," who associate the names of so-called decent candidates with the names and occupations of the vilest of the vile. And, as if this were not enough, efforts are actually being made, indirectly, it is true, to inflame the passions of bad men to such a degree as to induce them to oppose the new law, even at the risk of bloodshed. Some of the papers censure the Marshal for putting bad men in the places of good; but really, according to the showing of other papers, the good men are even worse than the bad; one of these good citizens, who is set down as upright, etc., is a downright knave, as we happen to know. When these developments are re-published throughout the country, as they surely will be, is it not natural to suppose that the commercial greatness and business interests of our city must suffer? Will merchants feel safe in visiting New York when its own papers make the fearful disclosure that its governing classes are composed of assassins and robbers? Such charges and counter charges as are made by the papers belonging to the various parties are calculated to lead to disorder on election day, and apprehensions of a bloody riot are rife in our midst. Men, holding high positions, it is said, are leagued with the scum of the earth while this exciting canvass is going on; others think nothing of swearing away a man's character, and depriving him of his liberty, at the same time that they, witnesses against him, have not the slightest scruple in violating their own word and written contract. But it is to be hoped that the strong arm of the law will assert its supremacy over all combinations of lawless men, and preserve the city from that bloodshed with which it has been threatened. We do not apprehend a fight on election day; we have generally observed that riots occur when least looked for, and vice versa.

THE POLITICAL MARKET is quite active, and operations in votes are lively. Of course, "repeaters" bring the highest rates, but fair prices are offered for single investments, with a brisk demand, although the supply on hand, it is thought, will fully equal all requirements. Trade in muscular Christianity will be used at the polls shows an upward tendency, the prices already offered being higher than was ever known before; this may be accounted for from the fact that Uncle Sam is said to have entered the market as a purchaser, and as this is the first time he has been known to invest in this stock, the prices current of the past cannot be accepted as a guide for this year's rates; speculators who saw the drift of things weeks ago, and bought low, have sold out at a handsome profit during the past week. Some dealers, being apprehensive of a scarcity in the article, have entered into negotiations with Koopmanschap with a view to introducing Coolie muscleme; but we do not believe that the thing is practicable, as the "heathen Chinee" cannot successfully compete with the home production. The week opens well, with the probability of a large trade.

THAT RISING YOUNG LAWYER, John G. Boyd, is fast making a name in the profession he has adopted, we are glad to say, as is evidenced by the records of the Courts. While his clients, in a majority of cases, come out of the ordeal unscathed, the clients of others who make greater pretentions are sent to prison for terms ranging from two to fifteen years. The fact is Mr. Boyd resorts to no claptrap, or buncombe, stereotyped speeches, but sifts the law clearly and advises his clients honestly; his word is his bond, and the poor who seek his advice are treated as human beings, and not as pigeons to be plucked. Mr. Boyd now occupies those elegant apartments on the ground floor of the CLIPPER Building, S. E. corner of Centre and Leonard streets, and those in need of legal advice should call on him if they desire fair treatment, honest counsel and reasonable terms.

DON'T FANCY THE JOB.—Paine, the pigeon shooter, has just beaten a Providence Tinker, but he sheers off from tackling a Jersey Taylor. Ergo, the Taylor must know how to cut out his work to better advantage than the Tinker.

THIRD DAY, FRIDAY, OCT. 28TH.

THE HURDLE RACE WON BY CONOLLY, THE THREE YEAR OLD SWEEPSTAKES BY KINGFISHER, THE TWO MILE DASH BY EDENTON, AND THE MILE HEAT RACE BY FINESSE.

An intermission of one day, and then the races recommenced. It shows how much the clerk of the weather favored the Maryland Jockey Club in the fact that the "off day" of the meeting was the only bad one of the week. On Friday, the third day, the sun shone bright and warm, and the air was as genial as at midsummer. The attendance was equally as large and fashionable as on the previous days, and the same good order and propriety distinguished the vast assemblage.

THE HURDLE RACE

was a handicap, with three sweepstakes, for a purse of $300; $400 to the winner and $100 to the second horse. The entries were Oysterman, 146lbs; Biddy Malone, 144lbs, and Richard S. Conolly, 142lbs. The betting was $200 for Biddy, $100 for Conolly, and $60 for Oysterman. The latter's non-favoritism was owing to his defeat on the first day, when he was beaten a long distance. His old colored jockey, Welsh, rode him; Gaffney was on the mare, and George Sutcliffe, A. Taylor's first lieutenant, was on Conolly. Biddy Malone made the running with Oysterman second and Conolly in waiting half a dozen lengths behind, for over a mile and three quarters, when Conolly closed on the leaders, passed Oysterman and was at Biddy's quarters as the last hurdle was leaped. A splendid set-to at the finish ensued, in which Conolly, by a head, was the winner. It was so close that every one in the grand stand thought it was either a dead heat or that the mare had won, until the decision was announced by the judges. Time, 3:58¼. This was Conolly's second essay in hurdling, and in both instances he has proved a capital performer. He is jointly owned by A. Taylor and Wm. Moran, who bought him of Mr. John O'Donnell, at Saratoga, for $800. Summary:—

THIRD DAY, Friday, Oct. 28th.—Hurdle race, handicap for all ages; two miles, over eight hurdles; $400 to first horse and $100 to second horse.

THE THREE YEAR OLD STAKES,

a dash of two miles, had ten subscribers at $50 each, h. f. with $1,000 added, but only two—Mr. Belmont's Kingfisher and Mr. Doswell's Midday—came to the post. The odds were heavy on Kingfisher, $100 to $15, but he never gave his backers the slightest uneasiness, for, after allowing Midday, on sufferance, to make the running for three-quarters of a mile, the moment Palmer gave him his head he shot past her and in a few strides was a dozen lengths ahead, coming home an easy winner under a hard pull in 3:46¾. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—SECOND RACE.—Sweepstakes for three year olds; dash of two miles; $30 entrance, half forfeit; the club to add $1,000; $750 to first horse and $250 to second horse.

THE TWO MILE RACE

for a purse of $1,000, of which the winner took $800, and the second horse $300, all carrying 100 lbs., had five contestants:—Edenton, Heywood, Alta Vela, Oysterman and Prophet, Jr. Alta Vela sold for $1,050, Edenton for $1,000, Heywood for $500, and Prophet, Jr., for $300. Alta Vela was the favorite throughout, with Alta in hot but unavailing pursuit, and he won easily by a length, hands down, in 3:45; the other two beaten off a long distance. It had been always supposed by the knowing ones that Edenton could beat any three horses in his class, but Mr. O'Donnell bought him, and sent him to Mr. Taylor's training stable, the horse has wonderfully improved, and has won four good races for his new owner. It was at first intended to enter and run Judge Hurlie for this stake, but the rain on Thursday giving promise of a heavy track, the gentleman after whom that horse is named, and who had the management of him in Mr. O'Donnell's absence, took the responsibility of entering Edenton instead, and his victory afforded the Judge the highest satisfaction. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—THIRD RACE.—Purse of $1,000, two miles, for all ages, to carry 100 lbs.; $800 to first horse, $300 to second.

G. F. Gambrill entered b h Prophet, Jr., by Prophet, dam Lucy, by Curtis..... 0

Time, 3:45.

THE MILE HEAT RACE

was the heaviest betting race of the day, for it had eight runners, Eclipse, Finesse, Orrolan, Susan Ann, St. Patrick, Enough, Planet and Limber Jim. Eclipse had the call, selling for $500; Finesse, $400; Susan Ann, $100; Orrolan, 50; field, $65. The favorite won the heat so easily in 1:47¾, that $500 to $100 was bet on her winning the race, but the odds were 2 to 1 against Finesse when cleverly in 1:48. Still $300 to $100 was laid on Eclipse, who made the running to within a hundred yards of the stand, when Finesse came with a rush, challenged, and after a magnificent struggle, won by a head and neck, in 1:47¾. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—Purse of $750; mile heats for all ages, for horses that had not won during the year.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, OCT. 29TH.

MADAME DUDLEY THE WINNER OF THE TWO YEAR OLD RACE—MY MARYLAND OF THE HANDICAP—GLENELG OF THE BOWIE STAKES, AND MIDDAY OF THE CONSOLATION PURSE.

The same bright Indian summer weather that had prevailed through the meeting was continued over the fourth and final day. The attendance was enormous, fully 25,000 people being present; the attraction of the great four mile heat, with six runners—with a single exception the largest field that ever started in such a race on the American turf—being irresistible for Marylanders, who flocked to Pimlico Park from every part of the state. The inaugural meeting has been a splendid success in every respect, whether as regards the high character of the racing, the large and brilliant attendance, or the pecuniary results. As regards the latter, we may state that the amount given by the club in purses and stakes was exactly $9,400, while the receipts on the first day alone exceeded $12,000, thus leaving the receipts of the three last days as a fund for future operations.

THE TWO YEAR OLD STAKES, mile dash, $50 entrance, half forfeit, with $500 added by the club, had four entries and two starters—Mr. Sanford's b f Madame Dudley, and Mr. Keene Richards' b f Lady Fairy, by Lexington, dam Nimble, the former for winning at Jerome Park, and the colt at Cincinnati. The betting was $100 to $40 on Madame Dudley, taken freely, for Buckshot had run and won in 1:46 at Cincinnati, and it was thought this was good enough to beat Lady Fairy. The latter went in front as soon as the drum was tapped, made the running at a fast pace, was never caught, and won in a canter by six lengths in 1:43.

FOURTH DAY, Saturday, Oct. 29th.—FIRST RACE.—Sweepstakes.—For two year olds; mile dash; winner during the year of one race seven pounds extra; two races, ten pounds extra; $50 entrance, half forfeit, the club to add $800. Closed with four entries.

THE RING.

THE ALLEN-GALLAGHER MATCH.

ALL GOES ON RIGHT.

The fears occasioned by the telegram alluded to last week that the proposed fight between Tom Allen and Jim C. Gallagher, for which the former staked $1,000 to the latter's $500, would take place, have proven groundless, and all last previous everything connected therewith, wore a favorable aspect. The announcement of Gallagher's illness and the probability of a forfeit being declared attracted a large crowd of the fancy element to Allen's quarters on the 26th ult., the date fixed for staking the final deposit, to note the proceedings and find out whether the fight would take place or not. Tom was on hand, but Gallagher's trainer, represented the latter. An effort was made by the Gallagher party to secure a postponement, but this was ineffectual, and finally, determined to make the most of a bargain which they considered none of the best, Kelly planked the requisite amount for Jim, and Allen quickly followed with his portion of the battle money, making up the sum total of $2,500, now in the stakeholder's hands. Jack Looney and Dick Roach were then announced as the parties commissioned to provide a steamer for the conveyance of principals and passengers to the scene of conflict, as well as take charge of other arrangements, Looney acting for Gallagher and Roach for Allen. The betting is at long odds in favor of Allen winning, but wagers were made at this meeting to the effect that Jim would "stay there" forty minutes and that Tom would receive a black eye. The St. Louis Times of the 29th ult. contains the following latest the affair:—

We learned last evening, from unquestionable authority, that Gallagher is in excellent trim and has not been weakened in the least from intermittant fever. It was given out at the meeting last night that the announcement was made as a ruse, to influence the betting. He is certainly well now and anxious to do battle. The stakes are all posted and the men will appear in the ring in splendid condition. Gallagher is a young man of fine physique and uncommon "reach," and may astonish the quid nuncs when he unconcealed Allen. He is a new boy, never having fought other than novices, but he rates on this match for testing his mettle and bringing him prominently before the sporting fraternity.

We learn that during the chaff which followed the staking of the money a proposition was made by Roach to Kelly, offering to match Rockey Moore against the latter for from $500 to $1,000 a side, to which Kelly replied that he was ready to make such a match upon any reasonable terms. Allen threw cold water upon the proposal by stating that he knew Matt had resolved never more to enter the ring, and that they were talking nonsense, but this didn't put an end to it, it being agreed to settle the matter by telegraphing to the New York boy to ascertain his desire. That such a match would be most welcome to those who admire the ring and support its disciples is undeniable, but we question very much whether Rockey can be induced to re-enter the arena, for reasons hitherto given. We shall see, however.

THE LATE MILL BETWEEN DONOVAN AND MURRAY.—Below we present a communication, the object of which is to correct an alleged mis-statement of facts by the correspondent who forwarded us the account, which appeared in our last issue, of the scrap between Donovan and Murray. As we desire to do justice to both men, we give space to it:—

WEST PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26th, 1870.

FRANK QUEER.—SIR.—In your issue of this week I notice an article in reference to a fight, which took place on the 20th inst. at Red Bank, New Jersey, between Jerry Donovan and James Murray, which article must have been written by one either totally ignorant of the real facts of the case, or else so completely a friend of Murray as to make him reckless with regard to truth. Not being a friend of either party myself, yet still in a position to be aware of the real facts of the case from the commencement of the fight to the summary ending, I will endeavor to correct the same. The party proceeded by steamer to the place of meeting, that, however, not being the place originally agreed upon, it having been the intention to fight on the Pennsylvania side of the river. The seconds of Donovan, upon learning this intention, refused to act as such for him on Jersey soil, and he was consequently compelled to accept the services of two outsiders, and they almost complete strangers, Donovan, however, being willing to fight anywhere, even on the boat; but as all parties were then aware that the police were in pursuit, it was finally decided that the fight should come off in Jersey, especially as the police would then have no right to interfere—a fact which they subsequently seemed to ignore. The ropes and stakes were carried ashore, the ring formed and the men entered, Donovan being the first to show up. After some little blowing before the choosing, and all things being now arranged, the fight commenced. After a little sparring Murray led off with his left, which was well stopped by Donovan, who, being very active on his feet, easily got out of the way. Murray, not to be denied, again led off with his right and was again stopped; however, in following it up with his left, he succeeded in striking the ribs, Donovan countering heavily on the breast with his left, following it by a blow with his right on the mouth, causing the claret to show itself. First blood now claimed and allowed for Donovan. They now clinched, and after a short struggle fell together, Murray being underneath. In round two Murray led off with his left, striking Donovan on the left side of his left eye brow, Donovan cross-countering him on the ear. Both men again clinched, and after considerable close work the round ended by Donovan going down to avoid punishment. In the third and last round, rumors of the police coming being heard, both men went in with a will, Donovan fighting Murray to his corner. The police now coming in sight, Murray slipped under the ropes, Donovan following in pursuit. Both men again went in with a will, but the police put a stop to any further proceedings. The statement that the ring was broken into by the friends of Donovan, and that blackjacks were used by them on Murray and his friends, is totally incorrect, the only difficulty there was being caused by some of the friends of Murray being a little intoxicated and boasting too loudly of their champion's abilities. Yours truly, A LOVER OF TRUTH.

EXHIBITION AT ROOME'S.—That old and well known resort, the Mercer Assembly Room, 87 Mercer street, which is once more under the management of Jake Roome, was the locale of a fistic soiree on the evening of Oct. 24th, the proceeds of which were devoted to the use of Harry Lark, a very good exponent of the science. There was a good sized crowd of the lovers of such entertainments present, who appreciated the sport provided. The sets-to were between Scott and Jerry Lane, Bill Fox and Young Madden, Patsy O'Hara and Hogan, Hennessey and Omealia, Bedding and Young Hanley, Cadley and Murray, George Cornwell and Bill Fuller, Hogan and Fuller, and the wind-up between Johnny Grady and the beneficiaire, the latter being particularly good, and striking much applause. Uncle Levee made first-class boxers as umpire, sandwiching sundry speeches and jokes between the bouts, which served to add to the good humor of the lookers on. Jake has renovated this establishment, which once more flourisheth as in the olden time, attracting numbers of those fond of seeing New York by gaslight.

RETURN OF THE GLADIATORS.—Jem Mace, Joe Coburn, Mike Coburn, Jerry Feen and other metropolitan professors of the art manly, recently took a trip to Atlanta, Ga., having been engaged by a speculative gentleman to give sparring exhibitions during the holding of the State Fair, returned to this city on the 28th ult. The trip, though greatly enjoyed by all, was not a profitable one to the projector, the entertainments but little more than meeting expenses. Mace took with him the belt which was presented to him by friends in this city, as well as other trophies, all of which attracted much curiosity and were greatly admired, particularly the belt. Speaking of this highly prized gift, we may mention that it is the intention of Mace to give a grand supper to those who donated it, together with a few invited guests, at his elegant establishment, "The Capitol," on 23d street, opposite Booth's Theatre. The train is now being laid and the fuse will shortly be fired.

ATHLETIC FESTIVAL AT THE CAPITOL.—An entertainment of a character calculated to please those who have a penchant for athletic displays is now on the carpet, being the public opening of the gymnasium connected with "The Capitol," Jem Mace and Phil Hargrave's well appointed and complete establishment, located at 60 West Twenty-third street, a few doors from Sixth avenue. The exhibition will consist of a grand assault at arms, embracing broad sword and single stick exercises, fencing with foils, performances on the trapeze, rings and other gymnastic apparatus, and illustrations of the science of self-defence by that master of the art, Jem Mace, assisted by his skillful cousin, Pooley. A number of amateur but accomplished gymnasts, fencers and sparrers will appear, and, as the admission will be by cards of invitation only, a select assemblage may be expected. For further particulars see card among our sporting advertisements.

SCRAP IN IOWA.—A correspondent writes as follows, under date of Glenwood, Iowa, Oct. 21st:—"Our usually quiet town was enlivened yesterday by an encounter in the fistic arena, between Robert Bodkin, of Mount Pleasant, in this state, and Tom Reilly, of Missouri, for $150 a side. Bodkin weighs 163 lbs. and Reilly 176 lbs. They fought gamely until they contested 32 rounds, when Reilly was knocked out of time by a tremendous blow from Bodkin under his left ear. Michael Gleason seconded Bodkin, while James McKenna did the honors for Reilly; Edward McCarthy, of Chicago, acted as referee. Bodkin passed his hat around the ring, after the fight, for Reilly, and collected $50. Reilly alleges it was a chance blow, and thinks he can whip Bodkin if he will fight him again. There is a prospect of a fresh match between the parties, and I will communicate the result."

GO ON WITH THE BALL.—Those who dislike to see sport nipped in the bud will be pleased to know that the decree has gone forth for the match between David Lewis and Bryan Campbell to go on, they having agreed upon a final stakeholder in the person of Thomas Jones, of Mahony City, Pa., at least so we are informed by a communication, now before us, purporting to be signed by both principals, which also directs us to forward the $550 now in our hands on behalf of the match to the said Thos. Jones; but as the handwriting does not correspond with that received by us previously over the signatures of the same men, we must decline complying with such request until we are further advised, in order to ensure ourselves, as well as them, against loss.

MCLEAN AND MURRAY.—Somewhat of a stir has been created by the making of a match between Billy McLean and Jim Murray, as first announced through our columns last week. The second deposit of a century from each was to have been posted on the evening of Oct. 31st, and the next, of like amount, is to go up at the Rose Hotel, corner of Market and 43d street, West Philadelphia, on the 7th inst. The match is for $500 a side, left open for double that sum, and the mill is to take place on Tuesday, Dec. 6th.

A HEAVY SENTENCE.—The Puritans, of Massachusetts, evidently have a bigoted antipathy to the natural and very often necessary art of self defence, without the use of deadly weapons, preferring we presume, that a man may shoot another without previous warning, and then, under the plea of lunacy, be let free to shoot as many more as he pleases. That's a Gothamite doctrine, too. The heavy sentence alluded to fell upon Patrick Kelser, who last week was "sent up" for two years by a Boston court for leaving Lawrence, Mass., to engage in a prize fight at Salem, N. H.

FOUR HOUSES were consumed by fire in Stanes-road, Hounslow, London, on Oct. 10th, in one of which resided the daughter of the late Thomas Sayers. The only things saved from destruction were Sayers' four brass guns (cannon) and the massive silver mounted lion's head cane, which was presented to him after his fight with Heenan, which, it is said, he prized more than all his trophies.

JERRY DONOVAN, of Philadelphia, writes to us, saying that if Murray (his late opponent) feels inclined to make a match, he can get on at any time he wishes, either before or after his mill with McLean, for a purse; or, if he will confine himself to weight, Donovan will fight him for $500 a side, whether he wins or loses with Billy.

WE HAVE LETTERS for John Morrissey, M. C., Tom Allen, Patsy Sheppard, Tim Hussey, Mike Foley, Jas. Mulligan and John Oddy.

JOHNNY LOUDEN, the well known sport and former part ner of Johnny Mackey, is now residing at Toronto, C. W.

TO THE CHAMPION WRESTLER.—The following came to hand accompanied by a small deposit, and the attention of James McLaughlin, winner of the champion belt at the tourney in Michigan, is directed thereto:—

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25d, 1870.

FRANK QUEER.—DEAR SIR.—Having noticed, with surprise, that no one has responded to a card which appeared in your paper of June 11th from Mr. McLaughlin, the present champion wrestler of America, I wish to issue this challenge to wrestle him for $5,000 a side, best two in three, fair back falls, to include the champion belt. I am ready to put up the full amount at any time and place that he may mention, within reason. As early reply is respectfully solicited through your columns. If Mr. McLaughlin does not accept I will claim the championship and wrestle any man in the United States on the same terms. Yours respectfully,

HARRIS F. CONNOR.

AQUATICS.

BOAT RACING ON THE POTOMAC.

THE POTOMAC VICTORIES.

Thursday, Oct. 27th, was a great day for the lovers of rowing sport at the national capital, two very interesting events occurring upon the Potomac on the afternoon of that day. These contests between the leading clubs of the city had long been looked forward to with deep interest by the citizens, and it was not surprising to see such an extensive outpouring of gallant sons and fair daughters to view the sport, which is of a kind they have so far been seldom favored with, the phrase "All quiet along the Potomac" being as applicable to the state of affairs aquatic there as it was in a military point of view during a part of the time that tried men's souls.

THE FIRST RACE

was between six-oared crew belonging respectively to the Potomac, Analostan and Arlington clubs, lapstreak outrigger gigs, 3 miles, being from the Aqueduct bridge, on the Georgetown side, one mile and a half down stream and return. The crews were as follows:—

Lightfoot, Analostan Club.—Gilmore, (bow), Caldwell, Roach, Williams, Turner, R. Lewis, (stroke), H. Lewis (coxswain).

Ariel, Potomac Club.—Wheatley, (bow), Cropley, Dudley, Boggs, Crumley, T. Wheeler, (stroke), R. Gordon, (coxswain).

Lightfoot, Arlington Club.—Rowland, (bow), Yates, Cohen, Pigott, Nesbitt, Lewis, (stroke).

Orson Bostwick was chosen referee, and started the boats at 4.15 with the crack of a rifle, the send off not being a good one. The Potomacs were quickest to catch the water, and put a boat's length between them and their opponents before either of the latter had left the line. From the bridge to the point off Analostan Island the relative positions of the boats were hardly changed, but when that point was reached a spurt by the Potomacs shot them several lengths ahead, and gave the Analostans their wash, and in the opinion of most spectators settled the fate of the race. At this point the Arlingtons claim that the tug-boat Comet ran so close to them as to interfere with their oars, the port oarsmen not being able to catch the water, and they lost not only considerable space but the second place in the race. All three crews at this time were rowing about 38 strokes per minute. Down the river, straight for the stake-boat, they headed, every muscle strained, every stroke regular, and as the stake-boats, three in number, were reached, Lewis, the coxswain of the Analostan, thinking the Potomac would turn the inside stake-boat, pointed for No. 2, but the Ariel diverged and rounded the latter, which somewhat disconcerted Lewis, and lost the Lightfoot several seconds. The rounding the stake-boat there was about 20 seconds between the Ariel and the Lightfoot, and about 15 seconds between the Lightfoot and the Minnehaha. Then the race was virtually ended, for though both the latter crews rowed steadily, pluckily and well, the prestige of successfully leading around the stake seemed to give renewed vigor to the Potomacs, and the space between their opponents rather increased than diminished, they reaching the starting point at 4h. 45m. 30s., running the race of three miles in just 22 minutes and 30 seconds, the Analostan being second and the Arlington last.

THE SECOND RACE

was between a four cared shell of the Analostans, Without coxswain, and a SIX oared out-rigger gig of the Potomacs, carrying coxswain. They were manned as follows:—

Adelaide, Potomac Club.—Turner (bow), McLeod, Wheatley, Derrick, Fox, Jones (stroke), ——— (coxswain).

Phenomenon, Analostan Club.—Corson (bow), Freeman, Gurley, Prescott (stroke).

The referee was Mr. Lowe, of the Arlington Club, and as the shades of night were beginning to fall the signal was given, the Potomacs again being first to get off, and in a few strokes obtaining a lead of a couple of lengths. The Analostans, nothing daunted by this, tugged away, and when off the bend of the river, crossed over and hugged the shore, thereby avoiding the current; but this was of no avail, for they had steadily lost ground, and when the stake-boat was rounded were eight lengths behind. It was now getting so dark that it was almost impossible to see the two boats from the deck of the tug; still both crews did their best they knew how—the foremost one to make their victory more complete and the Analostans to close up the breach, and, if possible, to rob victory of some of its joys. Both were successful, for the time keeper's report shows that the difference between the two boats at the return was 30 seconds, exactly the same as when they rounded the stake-boat. The time of the race was 19 min. 53 secs. for the winning boat.

The Arlingtons think they can make a better record than they did in the first race, as witness the subjoined challenge from them:—

We come out third in the race with the Analostans and Potomacs yesterday evening by half a boat's length, but attribute our defeat by the Analostans to our being run down by the steamer Comet, and hereby challenge the Analostans with the same crew to row us a race over the same course, on Saturday, the 5th of November next, at 3.30 o'clock.

J. C. ROWLAND, Sec. A. B. C.

Oct. 28th, 1870.

A correspondent writes to us from Georgetown, D. C., from whence the victorious club hails, stating that the time above given is incorrect and that the proper time is:—Ariel, first race, 21:00; Adelaide, second race, 19:24.

THE LEE AGAIN WINS THE HORNS.—The steamer R. E Lee has retaken "the horns" recently won from her by the Natchez, and which are emblematic of the championship of the Mississippi. Chafing under his previous defeat, the captain of the Lee determined to make another effort to retrieve her lost laurels, and on the morning of Oct. 27th, at 8.41:25, she left New Orleans for Natchez, where she arrived at 1.18:12 A. M. on the following day, having made the run in 16 hours 36 minutes and 47 seconds, or 14 minutes and 43 seconds faster than the Natchez. Her time to Carrollton was 28 minutes 25 seconds; College Point, 3 hours 28 minutes 30 seconds; Donaldsville, 4 hours 30 minutes 55 seconds; Baton Rouge, 7 hours 40 minutes 42 seconds.

PENNANT REGATTA OF THE ATLANTIC CLUB.—The pennant emblematic of the club championship will be contended for by first class sloops of the Atlantic Yacht Club, of Brooklyn, on Wednesday, Nov. 2d, over the usual course, viz.:—From a stake-boat off the Delaplaine House to and around the Southwest Spit and return. The contesting yachts will be the Dapsne and Qui Vive, the latter having challenged the former, which was victorious at the regatta held in September.

DEELY AND BLAKE'S MATCH.—On Thursday, 3d inst., the club championship match between R. B. Deely and Ed. Blake, of the Gulick Club, will be contested over the three mile course of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association, on the Hudson, at Pleasant Valley. The ability of the men is well known, and a good race is consequently looked for.

NEW CLUB.—A number of young men residing at Martinsville, West Va., organized a boat club on the 15th ult., electing the following officers:—President, James H. Sweeney; Secretary, Jacob Pence; Treasurer, Thomas, Charleston; Directors, Messrs. Alexander Linn, James Craig and John C. Hanes.

A BOAT CLUB was organized at South Chattanooga Tenn., on Oct. 24th, the officers of which are as follows:—President, Albert Fell; Treasurer, C. M. Campbell; Secretary, Richard Fell, Jr. Most of its members are workmen in the Vulcan works.

BROWN A BANKRUPT.—Walter Brown, the oarsman, has been adjudged a bankrupt upon his own petition. His liabilities are about $5,00—assets unknown. A meeting of his creditors was held at the United States Court, Boston, on the 28th of October.

IN THE LATE race for the championship of Toronto Bay, between Thos. Louden and Robt. Berry, the former pulled a paper boat, built by Waters, Balch & Co., of Troy, and Berry a cedar boat, built by R. Rennardson, of Toronto.

BILLIARDS.

QUICK PLAY.—Mons. Garnier, in playing a game with an amateur at the Metropolitan Hotel on the 26th, scored his 1,000 in the remarkable time of thirty-five minutes. This allows for his antagonist's time also. The game was the four ball carom, without push or crotch, and counted in twos and threes. On the 31st, at Flynn & Maris's, he scored at the three ball game a total of 122 against Cyrille Dion's 73. He is improving rapidly.

A TOURNAMENT IN CANADA.—A gold mounted cue was borne hence on the 31st, as the chief prize, along with something appreciable in cash, in a tournament to be held shortly for the championship of Canada, Cyrille Dion's term having expired. It has been proposed to play the three ball game, with small balls, on a carom table of lesser size than the standard. The rules will be somewhat similar to those governing the championship of America.

C. DION VS. RUDOLPHE.—In response to Rudolphe's proposition to play him at any game of billiards whatever, for $500 and upwards, Cyrille Dion names pin pool, for (say) $25 or $50 a ball, both to play until one or the other shall lose $500. Rudolphe's proposition appeared in our last week's issue, and we are authorized to make this response in behalf of Dion. Other terms to be mutually agreed upon.

MCDEVITT AND PARKER.—The match between John Deery and Joseph Dion is attracting so much attention that there is danger of the game between Frank Parker and John McDevitt being overlooked. It is French carroms, 400 points up, for $500 a side, and will be played in Chicago, doubtless at an earlier date than that assumed for the San Francisco match. Parker is the favorite.

THE NEW ENGLAND TOURNAMENT.—R. E. Wilmarth, of Boston, writes to learn when the New England tournament is to be held. The affair has been deferred so often that we have lost track of it. Wilmarth is desirous of entering, it appears. Will Mattie Hewins enlighten him?

JOHN DERRY AND JOS. LITTLE played a practice game at their rooms San Francisco, Cal., on the 21st ult., which the former won, making an average of 84.04. The loser made but 27 points.

GOOD ENOUGH.—Aside from his score of 303, chronicled in the CLIPPER of last week, Rudolphe has lately made runs of 56, 68, 81, 87, 94 and 131, at the three ball game.

J. F. B. MCCLERKY has again challenged Jos. W. Little to play for the champion cue of the Pacific coast and $200.

THE TRIGGER.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP PIGEON MATCH.

TINKER DEFEATED BY PAINE.

Fleetwood Park was visited by a number of trigger pullers and others on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 29th, when the match between Ira A. Paine, of New York, and Ed. Tinker, of Providence, R. I., for the champion medal and $1,000 was shot. The match was made shortly after the victory of the former over Miles Johnson, the original winner of the medal, and was shot in accordance with the rules of the Rhode Island Sportsman's Club, the conditions being to shoot at 100 single birds each, from H and T traps, 21 yards rise and 80 yards boundary. Oliver Marshall, of Providence, was chosen referee, Miles Johnson standing as judge for Tinker and Jesse Smith for Paine. In the early part of the match the Rhode Islander betrayed symptoms of nervousness and was outshot by Paine by 8 birds, but in the last half he shot steadily and gained upon his opponent, but ultimately lost the match by five birds. As soon as the shooting was concluded a fresh agreement was entered into between the same parties to shoot for the same amount, and upon like conditions, within six weeks from date. We subjoin the score:—

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

WHO IS SHE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Form of Venus—neck of swan—
Bosom fair to look upon;
Eyes that, when they on you turn,
Gaze into your heart and burn;
Raven hair, and O, such lips,
Sweeter than Nectarian sips!

In that proud form every grace,
Every beauty in that face
Tongue or pen can ever name,
Words are pointless, dull and lame,
When I try to undertake
Schedule of her charms to make.

Blue her blood must be, I ween;
I've no doubt she is a queen,
Or a princess royal, then;
"No, you ninny, look again!
In a her saloon doth she Tend the shooting gallery!"

A SERIO-COMIC AFFAIR.

A FAST YOUNG MAN BEFORE A FEMININE JUDGE AND JURY CLUB.

In its illustration of "Washington Society," the National Republican of a late issue gives space to the following:—"A strange affair took place last Tuesday evening in a certain house on Eighth street, near the navy yard. It was the trial of a young man before a jury of twenty-one women—more than the standard allowance in law—on the charge of talking naughty to young and innocent maidens of the vicinity. The young man, Mr. R., is about as handsome and attractive a youth as there is east of the capitol. He is not alone fascinating in manners and appearance, but he holds a high place in the estimation of church-going people. He was passing along Eighth street Tuesday evening, whistling in a low key the popular air of "Love Among the Roses," when he heard his name called, and turning around observed a lady in a doorway beckoning him to approach. He gallantly responded, and ascending the steps of the dwelling, soon found himself within the hall. He was suddenly surrounded by half a dozen strong, vigorous females, who carried him, neck and heels, unceremoniously into a back parlor. Here were assembled over twenty ladies—severe and strictly virtuous ladies, cold and impassive in their looks and deportment. The culprit was placed in the middle of the room, seated on an ottoman. Two elderly ladies sat on either side, while in the rear were four young girls, all in a row, the witnesses for the impending prosecution. The jury were ranged around the room, dignified as a bastern Parliament. glances at the unfortunate victim in the centre. The proceedings were opened by one of the elderly ladies, who, standing up and looking over her spectacles at the prisoner, demanded of him why he made use of certain expressions to her daughter, after returning from the edifying services of the Methodist church, on Sunday afternoon. The prisoner denied the charge, and called for the production of his accuser. Miss R. was motioned to step forward and relate the circumstances of the case in which she was concerned. Her story was to the effect that after coming from service at the church in company with Mr. B., she remained talking with him for some little time in the parlor of her own house; that he, curious about the structures of ladies' panniers and the conformation generally of ladies' dresses, observed to her that a certain article in her raiment was differently constructed from what he noticed on Miss G. She replied that it was strange that he should be so intimately acquainted with the mysteries of a female's wardrobe as warranted him in drawing the comparison. He responded by mentioning several other ladies whose style differed from hers, and finally she arrived at the conclusion that the young man was paying tolerably close attention to quite a number besides herself. Next day Miss B. told Miss G., and both young ladies finally informed their respective mothers. The latter, on being made aware of the subject, went to Miss B. though to bring up for conversation, grew extremely indignant, and suspected that any young man who would venture to engage a lady's attention with such a matter of discourse as the shape of an article in her wearing apparel would take greater liberties if permitted. A consultation among the female plutocracy of the neighborhood resulted in a decision to hold a court of inquiry, and see if it was for the benefit of the church and of morality in general to allow this young man to come and go freely among their families. Three witnesses corroborated the testimony of Miss B. by stating that the prisoner indulged in much the same kind of talk when in their company, but they did not consider his offence was very heinous or demanding any punishment whatever. The jury retired for consultation, and returned with a verdict of "not guilty by malice aforethought," but with a caution to the prisoner that if he ever again ventured on the bath evening by making the subject of his conversation an analysis of ladies' dresses, he will be treated to a correction to which tar and feathers are but a circumstance. On being set at liberty he kissed two of the witnesses, and retired in a very great hurry.

A SHAMELESS SCOUNDREL.

SEDUCTION OF A GIRL OF FOURTEEN.

Some five weeks ago, a little girl named Ellen McCue, whose father is a farmer living near Grand Haven, came to this city as a nurse girl in a family residing on Larned street east, near Brush. She has a sister engaged in the grocery business in Grand Haven, and from being often in the place Ellen had a slight acquaintance with many of the railroad officials who took their meals there, among them a brakeman named James Eagen. After the girl had been here for two weeks, she found that the duties expected of her were more than she could attend to. She then changed to the boarding house on the southwest corner of Larned and Brush streets, where the landlady allowed her to do light work in payment for her board. She intended to return home after a time, giving up the idea of going out to service. In some way Eagen found that she was stopping there, and he paid her a call one evening. He seemed like an old friend to the young girl, situated thus in a large city, knowing but one or two faces out of the thousands, and she was prevailed upon to accompany him for a walk. They left the house at 7 o'clock, and as the girl states, spent about an hour in looking at the sights displayed in the shop windows along the avenues. In sauntering along they came to an open stairway, and he asked her to go up. She at first refused, but he informed her that a dance was in progress up there, attended by many ladies, and that all he desired was for them to go up and look on. Yielding to the trumped up tale, the child went up two or three flights of stairs into a room, and Eagen locked the door and informed her of his true purpose. The girl commenced to scream, when he told her that no one could hear, and, by threats and force, made her comply with his wishes. After coming down from the room Eagen took the girl within a block of home, and then left her, warning her against exposing his conduct. This was a week ago last Friday night, and the girl kept the secret for two or three days, when she told her story to the landlady. The girl stated that she feared Eagen would kill her if she revealed his baseness. A physician was summoned, and two of them have been in attendance on the victim ever since.

For several days the matter was kept secret, to see if Eagen would not make restitution by marrying the girl, but it was found that he would not, and on such conditions the girl's parents would not consent. Yesterday morning the landlady proceeded to the Detroit and Milwaukee depot, to hold a conversation with the man, his train being just in, and her purpose was to have him arrested in case he refused to marry his victim. Before she could make the necessary arrangements the man resigned his position, received his pay and fled, undoubtedly going to Canada. The case was placed in the hands of the police, and every effort will be made to bring Eagen to justice. The victim is scarcely more than a child, and the villain's deed has wrecked her whole life. Being a stranger, she cannot give the location of the room, but it is believed that Eagen secured it from some one for the occasion, having his plans mapped out before enticing the child from home.—Detroit Free Press, Oct. 19th.

A RUINED LIFE.

BETRAYED! ABANDONED!! INSANE!!!

A case, as above indicated, involving the very essence of tragedy, occurred recently at San Francisco, Cal., in which a fine looking German girl named Amie Specht was examined by the Commissioners of Lunacy, pronounced insane and ordered to be confined in the asylum at Stockton. At the time of her examination it was stated or intimated that she had only been in this country a short time and had made the acquaintance of a German, who, under pretence of marrying her, had effected her ruin and then deserted her. She was provided for by some of her countrymen until she became bereft of reason from the overpowering sense of her condition. When her case was brought up in the police court, facts were stated concerning her that revealed the sad history of the poor girl. Willard Biter, an apothecary of the county hospital, was called to the stand and stated that he was a friend of the young girl's, and, on an order being made by Judge Stanley that her effects be taken in charge by the sheriff, he went to the house of Fred. Coppersmith, who had them, with the deputy sheriff. They demanded the property, when, as Biter testified, Coppersmith commenced to abuse him and ended by striking him. Deputy Sheriff Barney Murray took the stand and corroborated Biter's statement, with the exception of the abusive language, as the parties spoke German and he didn't understand it.

Mr. Coppersmith, on being sworn, admitted that he had struck Biter, and in extenuation stated that the latter had been stopping at his hotel for a time. Some months ago Annie Specht came to this city from Germany, and also stopped at his place. Being without friends she made the acquaintance of Biter, and after a time he promised to marry her. Matters went on smoothly for some time, until it transpired that Biter and the girl were illicitly cohabiting with each other. Biter soon left, when the girl came to Coppersmith and confessed that she had been deserted, and bewailed her fate so continually that she became insane. Coppersmith testified that, when Biter came to his house with the sheriff, he felt angry, and told him so; that Biter said he could not do anything to help the girl. This angered Coppersmith still more, and he replied, "Yes, you d—d scoundrel, but you could rush her and then cast her off," and struck at Biter several times. Judge Pennie said that he considered the striking in a trivial light, and would only impose a fine of $5 on Coppersmith, which was paid.

RUIN OF AN INNOCENT GIRL.—One of those cases which exhibits the effects of plot and passion by man, so called, and stupid severity of parents to an unfortunate girl, has just been brought to light at St. Joseph, Mo., where the victim, a lass of not yet seventeen years, is now an inmate of a house of ill fame. About a year since, it appears, she resided and moved in respectable society in St. Louis, where and when a young devil of dissolute habits clandestinely made vows of love and affection to her, but she abhorred him for his general conduct and character and refused to have anything to do with him. Last January he renewed his professions and asked her to meet him at a certain place to go to a minister and have the marriage ceremony performed. He threatened at that time, if she did not go, he would shoot her and any man she might associate with. She did not go, and a few days thereafter he renewed his request with the same result. A few nights after he met her as before and renewed his intentions. Twice during the evening he brought her what he represented and what appeared to be a raspberry lemonade. This she now believes to have contained some strong liquor or drug. She avers that it had a strange, bewildering effect upon her mind, and that he then made her drink a second glass of the same liquor; took her by the arm and held her; said she would now have to go with him or it would be the worse for her. He led her down stairs, where there was a carriage in readiness, put her into the carriage and drove to the residence of a clergyman, where the marriage ceremony was performed. It was about 10 o'clock in the evening and no witnesses were present. She was at the time confused and bewildered and gave no legal consent to the marriage. Immediately after the ceremony she was taken to a hotel, where the night was passed. Next day the girl, having fully come to her senses and re-learning her condition, while the fellow was absent, left the hotel and returned to her home. Here she was refused admittance, and, after wandering around the streets a day or so, rather than return to the man she abhorred, she sought a house of prostitution. From that hour she has never seen either her parents or the man she detested.

THE EMPEROR'S MISTRESS.

HOW SHE MADE HER SOAP.

Among the singular documents unearthed at the Tuileries is one showing the fortune of the Emperor's mistress. It is the marriage settlement of Elizabeth Ann Hergett, described as the Countess Beauregard, of France, of Chateau Beauregard, near Versailles, better known as Miss or Mistress Howard, on her union with Clarence Trevellyan in May, 1854. Two schedules attached to the settlement show that the Countess possessed £117,000 in English and other securities, including $90,000 in Pennsylvania railroad debentures, and $74,000 in St. Louis and Cincinnati; also, £59,000 described as "other stocks," besides funds and securities distinguished as the "settled fund," as well as divers other shares, securities, and jewels and other personal estate and landed property in France, and furniture, plate, and jewels therein. The last mentioned property is not scheduled or valued, but is distinguished as a "residuary estate," and was of great extent. Leaving it out, the specific items described amount to the startling sum of £176,000. This must have been amassed in the brief period of two years and a half, between the 2d of December, 1851, and the 15th of May, 1854; for it is notorious that down to the date of the coup d'etat the pecuniary circumstances of Napoleon were very straitened. The settlement contains a provision of £20,000 sterling in favor of Martin Constantin Hergett, entitled by France to be called Count Beauregard, son of the Countess, by whom it is not stated, but he is well known in England to be the son of Jem Mason, the celebrated steeplechase rider. The trustees of settlement were Constance Jean Mocquard, 517 Rue St. Honore, Secretary to the Emperor; Nathaniel William John Strode, 1 Albany street, London; Edward Moira, 25 Holles street, Cavendish square, London. The solicitors were Flodgate, Clark and Finch, 43 Craven street, Strand, William Flodgate subscribing as witness. At the time of the Countess de Beauregard's death her property excelled the united wealth of Madame de Pompadour and Madame du Barry. The house at Chiselhurst, now occupied by the Empress Eugenie, was rented by her of Strode, one of the trustees of the above settlement. It forms a singular addition to the whole scandal. That house, which is only held by Strode as trustee, is actually the property of Count de Beauregard, the natural son of the Emperor's mistress.

CONNECTICUT'S CONSORTORIAL CONNECTIONS DISCONNECTED.

The way in which the Nutmegists are going in for untying the matrimonial knot is "perfectly awful," as the ladies would say, and as the following data in regard to the docket of the Hartford Superior Court exhibits:—

Last year there were 491 divorces granted in the whole state, the largest number before reported in a single year, the ratio being one to each 1-7 marriages. In 1869 there were 1,000 libels filed, in 164 the husband. The cases of divorce were as follows:—Adultery, 157; crimes, 184; desertion, 305; fraudulent contract, 3; intemperance, 159; misconduct, 240. The classification includes the separate allegations in each case, so that it does not, in the aggregate, tally with the number granted.

The most interesting case which has come to trial during the past year was heard in the court for Hartford county, and developed a record of brutality on the part of husband and cruelty on that of wife heard of. Katie M. King, of East Granby, sued for a divorce from John H. King, on the ground of intolerable cruelty, misconduct, infidelity, confession of arson, &c. The parties were married May 30th, 1869, and separated Oct. 1st, 1869. The wife was thirty-seven years of age. She testified that six weeks after her marriage her husband swore at and cursed her. Then followed a long series of abuses He was jealous of her, probably because of her good looks, and took a revolver to bed with him, declaring himself afraid he would be shot if he should wake up and find her out of bed he would kill her. She testified that he was even jealous of her grandfather. He charged her with improper intimacies with his brother, his hired man, his uncle, and almost every man in the neighborhood. On the worst moods he would throw her out of doors, and when she found herself in a delicate situation he made her lift a heavy bag of meal and jump from a wagon iand of roods. The result of this was that she was obliged to go to bed. He had owned a cigar shop, which just before his marriage was destroyed by fire, and she testified that he confessed to her that he burned it to get the insurance, and she exclaimed, "Oh, dear, it I have got to live with such a man as this he had shall I do?" Finally she left him because of his intolerable thirsty. she went to her father's house, and there remained till the trial. The court granted the divorce, and she went on her way rejoicing. The case excited great interest. It was tried at the last term of the court.

A FALSE WIFE.—There lives in Springfield, Ill., an insurance agent, who has for some time past doubted his wife's fidelity; and, to convince himself thereof, he told her on the night of Oct. 21st that he was going to St. Louis to stay over Sunday; and, bidding his wife good bye, he started, as she supposed, for the train; but he suddenly changed his mind about going, and went to his office to think. He remained there until about nine o'clock in the evening, when he started for home, and, upon arriving there, went up to the parlor window and looked through a blind, when he saw his loved and adored one in the embrace of a merchant of the city. The insurance agent thereupon returned to his office, procured his revolver and started again for home, for the purpose of putting an end to the destroyer of his happiness. On reaching his house he found all dark, when he secretly and cautiously gained an entrance, and proceeded to his wife's chamber with a light, there to find the merchant in company with his wife, when he fired at said merchant, who fled, but not in time to escape with his life. The injuries received thereby leaving him in a very critical condition. The agent shipped his wife off on the first train to her folks, and the next morning filed a bill for divorce. The merchant is a married man and has one of the handsomest women in Springfield for a wife, whom all should pity under such trying circumstances.

DIVORCE WANTED.—A rather weather beaten looking darkey was seen walking through the halls of the court-house in Cincinnati, on the 21st ult., and looking in through the glass doors of the rooms as he passed along. At last he retired into the room of the district court, and approaching the desk of the affable gentleman who sits behind it, said to him:—"My wife is outside here in the hall, and she and I want to know if we cannot get a divorce." The reply was that it could only be accomplished through the courts as an ordinary suit. He then beckoned in the wife, and proceeded to state that they had been a year and a half married, she being at the time a widow with children. "Well, what's the matter now," but both parties had become tired of the contract and wished to part. He was unable to bring any charge against his wife, whereon she suggested that he should quit the state of Ohio for three years and she would then bring the suit. The impetuous husband ejaculated angrily, "Three years! I ain't going to wait no three years. I must have that ere divorce right off." Matters darkened lustily, Charley Mills congratulating himself on reaching that station he was looking for the train to stop at . . . On the other side the Reds went out in one, two, three order, satisfied with having defeated the champions by a score of 7 to 1, the worst defeat the Mutual club has ever sustained.

The fielding of the Red Stockings in this game was up to the highest mark. Patterson's pitching was very effective throughout. No Mutual scoring but first base hits from it, while not a single run was earned. In estimating the play of the pitcher, batsmen and fielders in the game, the former's skill is to be judged not by the number of runs scored, but by the chances scored for outs, as shown by a fair analysis of runs earned. The batting skill is shown not by total bases, but by first base hits, and the fielding is proved by the record of first bases given by errors in the shape of palpable muffs, stopped by base and overthrows. Now the record of runs earned in this game is 3 to 0 in favor of the Reds; of first base by errors the figures are 4 to 2 in favor of the Reds, and of total fielding errors 10 to 6 in their favor. The batting score shows a total of 14 first base hits for the Reds, to 6 for the Mutuals. The Reds have a superiority in pitching, fielding and batting. In the last game between the Chicago nine and the Mutuals, the record of runs earned was 4 to 4; of first base by errors, Mutual, 4 times; Chicago, 9 times; of total fielding errors, Mutual, 22; Chicago, 24; and of first base hits, Mutual, 10; Chicago, 23. This plainly shows not only a superiority of pitching, fielding and batting on the part of the Reds over the Whites, but a decided superiority in fielding by the Mutuals in their game with the Reds over their display in the game with the Whites. We refer to this matter in justice to the Red Stockings, who have been unmercifully pitched into and jeered at by the Chicago papers, whose writers form very loose and crude judgements on the play of the leading nines of the country. LOCOMOTIVE RACE.

A MILE A MINUTE.

It is a fast age we live in, as is manifested by the number of races reported, gossiped and talked about wherever you go. Even the fourth estate has had to fall in line, and but sure to involve someting about race. Is it politics or war, then the Celtic race, Sclavonic race, Saxon race, white race or colored race is brought up; is it sports, then horse race, boat race, yacht race, foot race, or some other race comes in; is it machinery—then steamboat race, locomotive race, or mill race; is it creed, then there's the devil's race, involving also the race for life; besides a thousand and one other races that we don't happen to think of just now; but we have stated enough to prove our proposition that this is a fast age, and the tendency of all is to get a little ahead of time and arrive at our destination before we start, a la trans-Atlantic cable, after which the CLIPPER pretty soon comes in. In fact, we don't know but that this great race period is owing to our fast craft, for up to the being set about about eighteen years since this race question was almost unheard of, things and theories being then very slow; in fact, some of 'em used to turn and go backwards; and to give publicity to a race was thought a disc-race. Well, we have got over that now, and we are all a racing, with the CLIPPER a little ahead according to its clock on the sidewalk; at least we thought so till the morning of the 27th, when we read the following account of a locomotive or bullgine race in the Sun, in which one of 'em got up and got of its own accord. Read it:—

The Washington and New York Express, which leaves West Philadelphia for New York at 2.35 A. M., always stops at Mantua Junction to change engines. The locomotive in readiness at this point brings the train on to New York or Jersey City. It is changed to a third engine which takes the train to Jersey City. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning Engine No. 81 was ready at Mantua Junction for the express. This locomotive is said to be the oldest passenger engine on the road, and, though somewhat worn with age, excels many of its juniors in both power and speed. While waiting for the express the engineer and the fireman, having half an hour to spare, left their engine standing on the main track and went to breakfast. At this dark and early hour the only persons at the Junction were employees of the company. The veteran locomotive was standing alone. Its bright head light threw a gleam up the track, revealing distinctly far into the darkness beyond the continuous line of steel over which its ponderous wheels had so often rolled. From its ash pan dropped the heated cinders, and from the oily elbows of its steel joints came the fizzing sound of imprisoned steam. All was quiet, and the men, whose duty it was to handle the reins of this iron monster, supped on unsuspicious of such a contingency occurring as its breaking loose. The homely feast disposed of, they lit their pipes, but they had not enjoyed more than half a dozen whiffs, when they were startled from their reverie. To their astonishment their engine began moving, and before either of them could recover their self-possession it had shot out of sight and was making the most remarkable time on record. In a few seconds moments the speed was terrific. Without a second's delay its engine was sent in pursuit of the runaway locomotive. The news of the runaway spread consternation among the passengers, and so anxious were they on the subject that nearly all of them left their seats and crowded around the operator Kensington, Frankford, Bredrburg and Tacony stations were successively passed by the pursuing locomotive without discovering anything of No. 81. Just before reaching Holmesburg Junction a thin streak of light was descried in advance, which appeared to them like a fiery serpent shooting over the track. The tail of the imaginary serpent was soon touched and turned out to be a trail of hot cinders dropped by the fugitive locomotive. Believing that they were now close to the latter, they also kneed speed until the tremping poles no longer looked like a gigantic fine tooth comb. At Torresdale, a little beyond the junction, the truant engine was reached. Its fires were burned down and it had come to a dead stop. A comparison of watches showed that the runaway engine had travelled fifteen miles in about as many minutes. No damage was done, and, owing to the unreasonable hour at which the event occurred, none but the railroad officials were badly scared. The engin er and the fireman of locomotive No. 81 are at a loss to understand how the engine's throttle was opened. They did not see any person approach the engine, yet they insist that the engine could not have started without some mischievous hand being first laid upon it.

HALL'S Journal of Health gives this bit of practical wisdom:—"If a man can sleep soundly, has a good appetite, with no unpleasant reminders after meals, the bodily habits being regular every day, he had better let himself alone whether he is as big as a hogshead or as thin and dry as a fence rail.

BASE BALL.

A GREAT GAME AT BROOKLYN.

THE RED ABOVE THE GREEN.

A Waterloo Defeat of the Mutuals.

RED STOCKINGS vs. CHAMPION MUTUALS.

On Oct. 26th the Red Stockings returned to New York from Troy, after defeating the strong nine of the Haymakers of that village by a score of 12 to 7, and on the afternoon of that day played the first game of a new series of contests with the Mutual Club. The Saturday previous they had opened play in the east with a note worthy triumph over the Athletics in Philadelphia by a score of 15 to 8, and therefore they entered upon this contest flushed with two victories, that at Troy being the most creditable display. The Reds, however, went into this game minus the services of Allison, their famous catcher, Deane taking his place in the nine, and McVey playing in his position as catcher. The Mutuals, too, were short handed, they not having that useful player, Swandell, in their nine. They had a fair substitute, however, in Higham. The weather was all that could have been desired, the temperature being quite warm, and, as a close contest was anticipated; fully 3,000 persons were in attendance at the Union grounds, though the admission fee was double the usual rate. Mr. Ferguson had been agreed upon as umpire before the game, and no more impartial man could have been chosen for the position.

THE GAME.

At 2.45 Ferguson called "play" as umpire, and, the Red Stockings having won the toss, sent the Mutuals to the bat. Hatfield led off with a sharp grounder to Waterman, who judged it beautifully and sent it to Gould in turn. Eggler then took his base on three balls, and, getting to his second by a sharp out, ran for his third just as Patterson sent a bounder to George Wright, who sent the ball to Gould, and the latter passed it in turn to Waterman at third, and though the latter, in the act of touching Eggler, dropped the ball, the umpire properly decided the player out, the penalty for not closing the innings with a blank . . . On the other side George Wright opened with a high ball to right field, which Martin caught well after a good run for it. Gould was next, and he hit a bounder to E. Mills, who fumbled the ball and had a life given him. Waterman was third man, and he, after having a life given him by C. Mills, popped up a ball, which Higham caught. Two out and no runs. Deane now came into the rescue with a safe hit and took his base, but before a run could be scored Harry Wright retired on a foul fly by Nelson.

2. Patterson led off with a hot one to Brainard, who backed his own pitching well, and put his opponent out at 1st; Nelson then hit to Gould and retired the latter in the same manner, which generally yield a base on a hit, and before the pitcher could get it Nelson was on the base. E. Mills then hit a high ball to right field, which Deane dropped, and on seeing the error Mills ran for second; but Nelson failing to touch third, the latter was also tagged between first and second by Sweasy and Gould, and as Sweasy fielded Martin's ball sharply to Gould directly afterwards, another blank was drawn . . . . Leonard opened with a high ball, which Higham dropped after a brutality on part of the latter, and he took his base home. Brainard was then put out on a foul bound by C. Mills, and Sweasy was easily disposed of on the fly by Patterson. McVey, after striking weakly at the first ball he has pitched him on called balls, Deane following suit. Leonard now came to the rescue with a three bagger over Martin's head, and as Gould hit safely for his base, George earned his run—or rather Sweasy did for him—after which Nelson fielded Waterman out in good style, the innings closing with 3 runs scored and none earned.

3. C. Mills led off in this innings with a ball too near to George Wright to be safe, and he retired at first. Wolters then had a base on called balls, but Beliaar, who followed him, was finally stopped by Sweasy, who promptly forwarded it to Gould in time, and again were the Mutuals obliged to go to the field without scoring, the beautiful fielding of the Reds eliciting deserved applause. . . . Deane led off with a three bagger, and after Leonard had been well fielded out by E. Mills, and Brainard had been finely caught by C. Mills on a sharp fly up, Sweasy sent two men in by a safe bounding ball to left field, on which he earned three bases, he himself jumping home on Gould making a fly to E. Mills close to the bat. This left the totals at 5 to 0, in favor of the Red Stockings, two of the five runs having been earned.

4. Hatfield led off with a hot one to Waterman, but, as before, he was fairly fielded out. George Wright, on being given a life by Gould, but George, failing to get a firm foothold, threw it hot and wild to Gould, and Eggler had a life given him. This was George's solitary error in the game. The next two strikers, however, were pretty disposed of by Gould and Waterman, and Harry Wright was finally got home on Sweasy's two base hit to centre field. McVey closed the innings by going out at first by Flowers. One run. Score, 1 to 1.

3. York out at first by Sweasy to Gould; Fisher made first on a fine hit past second and stole to third; Craver hit to Leonard, who held the ball and caught Fisher between third and home, Craver getting to first. King was caught on a fly to George Wright. Another blank . . . . George Wright hit to Fisher and went out at first; Gould sent a ball in the same direction, but it went past Fisher and Gould made first. Waterman sent a most aggravating ball towards first base, which Fisher should have got, but which McGary ran for and failed to get to first in time. These short hits are invariably safe for a base. Dean batted finely to centre and Gould came in; Harry Wright followed with a safe hit to left, and Waterman trotted home. Leonard went out at first by Craver, but in the meantime Dean scored; to the great relief of the Trojans, Brainard lipped out. Three runs. Scores 4 to 1.

4. Bellan out on a foul. Foran to first on a fine low hit to left. Megary, by a long hit to left, took two bases and sent Foran home. McMullen made a safe hit to left, but Fisher's muff on it had undid in time. Mack got his base. He was then forced out at second by Flowers' hit to Waterman, Megary coming home. York went out on a fly to Sweasy. Two runs . . . . Short and sweet. Sweasy out by Flowers to Fisher. McVey . . . . Megary out. George Wright out on a fine catch by King. Whitewash. Score, 3 to 4 against the Haymakers.

5. In the innings Wright resumed his old position at short, and Leonard went to left. Fisher hitting too near Gould, was touched on his way to first. Craver made his arm on a bounder past George Wright. King made first, but hit direct to Sweasy, who touched Craver on his way to second. Fisher reaching third on the play. Sweasy. No runs . . . . Gould hit to Flowers and got to first in time. Waterman to first on a ball past Fisher. Dean out at first on a short hit to McMullen. H. Wright out at first by a throw from Flowers. Gould in. Leonard out by Craver to Fisher. One run. Score, 5 to 5.

6. Foran hit a foul, which was taken on the fly by Waterman. Megary made first on a fine hit to left, and stole second. McMullen then sent a long one to centre field, which Leonard took in, sending Megary home. Flowers sent in McMullen by a good hit past second, but this was all, for York was caught by Harry Wright, and Fisher fell a victim to Leonard. Two runs . . . . Brainard made first on a good hit to left, and stole second. Fine throw by Craver to Bellan, in old fashioned style; here McMullen pitched a ball clear over the catcher, and Brainard came home quite comfortably. This was a pure gift, for the next two strikers went out, McVey on a foul bound to Bellan, and George Wright on the fly by Foran. One run. Score, 6 to 5.

7. Craver gave Sweasy a chance for a fly and went out; King made first on a fine hit to left; Bellan hit to George Wright, forcing King out at second, and the latter soon after was forced out at first by Bellan and forced Bellan out in the same way. No runs . . . . Gould was caught on the fly by Foran; Waterman hit to Flowers and would have been out, but Bellan got ahead of Flowers and failed to get the ball after it; Deane hit to McMullen and was put out at first, but Bellan redeemed himself by putting Harry Wright out by a good throw to Fisher. No runs. Score still 6 to 5.

8. Foran made first on a good hit to centre, stole to third and came home on a passed ball. Megary made his initial base on called balls, and McMullen followed with a good hit to right field and Megary made his run. Two runs and no outs, and the hopes of the Trojans were strong: but the next three strikers went out on flies as fast as they could come on to Gould and Waterman. Whitewash. Harry Wright now York by Leonard. Two runs . . . . Leonard out at first by Craver; Brainard ditto by Bellan; Sweasy got a ball past short and made first, but was left by McVey, out at first after three strikes. No runs. Score 9 to 6 in favor of the Reds.

9. Craver went in and tried to get a ball over Leonard's head, but failed; King for the fourth time made his base on a good hit, and for the fourth time got left, as Bellan went out on a throw from Waterman to Gould—under the Red Stockings' new system. Two went in, with one to tie and two to win, evidently meaning business. George Wright stood at his base till the umpire sent him to first on called balls. McMullen pitching very wildly; Gould was put out at first by Fisher, the ball going from Craver to Bellan, and Wright made third, which was muffed by Bellan, who on drawing back his hand to throw to the catcher found, to his surprise, that the ball was not in it, as Waterman got the first and George home, tieing the game. Waterman struck out to second, and Gould to Craver by the latter, the ball hard and sent it to left field, just inside the foul line, and took two bases, while Waterman ran in, making the winning run. Just then our reporter's attention was all interest in the game. Suffice it to say that the Reds hit the ball about in lively style till they had added six runs to their score, thus winning the game by a total score of 12 to 7.

HAYMAKERS vs. RED STOCKINGS.

The first match this season between these crack professional clubs of Troy and Cincinnati took place in Cincinnati, Aug. 8th, on which occasion the Red Stockings defeated their opponents by a score of 24 to 8. On Oct. 24th the return game was played at Troy, and the result, though another victory for the Reds, afforded proof of an improvement made in the Haymakers' play since August, well worth a detailed description, we give the play of each innings as it appeared in the Troy Times:—

First Innings.—Flowers lost the toss and the Haymakers went to the bat; Flowers, the first striker, was caught on a foul fly by Mc-Vey; York walked for a good ball, and after two strikes had been called, sent a bounty to centre field and easily made first. He fell a victim, however, to Fisher's hit to Leonard, and went out at second. Fisher getting safely to first. Craver sent one to Waterman too hot to hold, and got to first; King made a fine hit to left field, bringing in Fisher; Bellan sent a fly ball to right field, which Dean caught, and the side was out for one run . . . . Intense interest was shown as George Wright, the "king of the ball field," stepped to the bat. His majesty, however, selected a very bad place for the ball to go; he hit direct to Flowers, who sent it to Fisher so quickly that George was saved the trouble of running; Gould sent a "sky scraper" to right field; Foran settled us; and Gould easy out. Waterman hit short to pitcher, and McMullen helped him to first by throwing about two feet above the pitcher's head; so good an example was not lost on Flowers, who threw the ball sent him by Dean in exactly the same way; two bases made on the throw. Dean also tried to steal second, but was "taken in the act" by Craver, and the side was out for a blank after all. Score 1 to 0.

2. Foran went out on three strikes; McGary made first by a fine hit to left, but McMullen went out on three strike outs by Craver, by Brainard lifted a high fly to centre, made first, stole second and finally got home on Sweasy's two base hit to centre field. McVey closed the innings by going out at first by Flowers. One run. Score, 1 to 1.

3. York out at first by Sweasy to Gould; Fisher made first on a fine hit past second and stole to third; Craver hit to Leonard, who held the ball and caught Fisher between third and home, Craver getting to first. King was caught on a fly to George Wright. Another blank . . . . George Wright hit to Fisher and went out at first; Gould sent a ball in the same direction, but it went past Fisher and Gould made first. Waterman sent a most aggravating ball towards first base, which Fisher should have got, but which McGary ran for and failed to get to first in time. These short hits are invariably safe for a base. Dean batted finely to centre and Gould came in; Harry Wright followed with a safe hit to left, and Waterman trotted home. Leonard went out at first by Craver, but in the meantime Dean scored; to the great relief of the Trojans, Brainard lipped out. Three runs. Scores 4 to 1.

4. Bellan out on a foul. Foran to first on a fine low hit to left. Megary, by a long hit to left, took two bases and sent Foran home. McMullen made a safe hit to left, but Fisher's muff on it had undid in time. Mack got his base. He was then forced out at second by Flowers' hit to Waterman, Megary coming home. York went out on a fly to Sweasy. Two runs . . . . Short and sweet. Sweasy out by Flowers to Fisher. McVey . . . . Megary out. George Wright out on a fine catch by King. Whitewash. Score, 3 to 4 against the Haymakers.

5. In the innings Wright resumed his old position at short, and Leonard went to left. Fisher hitting too near Gould, was touched on his way to first. Craver made his arm on a bounder past George Wright. King made first, but hit direct to Sweasy, who touched Craver on his way to second. Fisher reaching third on the play. Sweasy. No runs . . . . Gould hit to Flowers and got to first in time. Waterman to first on a ball past Fisher. Dean out at first on a short hit to McMullen

THE TURF.

Inauguration Meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club at Pimlico Course, Baltimore.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, OCT. 25TH.

THE HUBBLE RACE WON BY BIDDY MALONE—NARRAGANSETT PORPHYS TO STAMPS IN THE $30,000 MATCH—PREAKNESS WINS THE DINNER PARTY STAKES, AND CONDUCTOR THE MILE HEAT RACE.

The inauguration race meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club over their newly constructed race course at Pimlico, near Baltimore, commenced on Tuesday, Oct. 25th, and continued over four days. A more brilliant and successful opening was never known in the history of the American turf. Turfmen from every state of the union were there to assist at the inaugural effort to revive racing in Maryland, and brought on their stables to take part in the sport, and the Baltimoreans turned out en masse to patronize the meeting. To Governor Oden Bowie, the president of the Jockey Club, is due the chief credit for this success, for he has been indefatigable in his exertions. Through his influence with the state legislature a grant of $35,000 was made towards the building of a new race course, and the city authorities of Baltimore contributed an equal amount to the same object. A magnificent track has been constructed at Pimlico, about six miles from the city, which is located amid charming scenery. At present the access by rail only extends to within two miles of the course, but next year it will be carried to the immediate vicinity of the gates. So successful has the meeting been that the Jockey Club will in future hold two meetings, in the spring and fall, so that the southern stables can assist at the first, on their route to Jerome Park and Long Branch, and, on their return in the fall, can take part in the latter meeting.

THE HUBBLE RACE.

which commenced the sport, had two contestants; Col. McDaniels' Oysterman, 146 lbs., and J. Donohue's br m Biddy Malone, 139 lbs., for the purse of $500 for the winner, and $300 to the second horse. The betting was $100 to $60 on Oysterman; these odds being freely taken by the friends of the mare, who had the advantage of Hugh Gaffney's services in the saddle. Biddy Malone took the lead from the tap of the drum, led the favorite a couple of lengths over the four hurdles on the first mile and passed under the string four lengths ahead. Oysterman now began to fall off so palpably as to cause his backers to look blue, and at the sixth hurdle on the back stretch he was twenty lengths behind. The race was soon over, for Biddy Malone came along at a clipping pace, and won the race by over one hundred yards; time, 4:00¾. Summary:—

THE $30,000 MATCH

between Mr. Sanford's b f Stamps, 3 yrs, and Mr. J. Hunter's br c Narragansett, 4 yrs, two miles, $10,000 each, h. t., which has been a source of discussion and speculation among turfmen since it was made at the Saratoga meeting in 1869, was the next event. It resulted in a forfeit of $5,000 on the part of Narragansett, whose wind has become so affected as to prevent him standing a training preparation. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—SECOND RACE.—Match 10,000 a side, half forfeit, two miles.

THE DINNER PARTY STAKES,

the great event of the meeting, and with one solitary exception the richest stake ever run in America, was the next race. It was for three year olds only, $1,000 entrance, half forfeit, two miles, and had thirty entries in the list, was the progeny of Lexington, Leamington, Bairowsie, Brown Dick, Eclipse, Censor, War Dance, Lightning, Uncle Vic, Prophet, Eclipse and Trovatore. Seven of the thirty horses entered came to the post when the bell rang—Capt. T. G. Moore's ch f Foster, by Lexington, dam Verona; T. W. Doswell's ch f Ecliptic, by Eclipse, dam Nina; H. H. Sanford's b c Preakness, by Lexington, dam Ray Leaf; Bowie and Hall's ch f My Maryland, by Brown Dick, dam Fanny McAllister; A. Belmont's ch f Finesse, by Lexington, dam Flageret; J. Chamberlain's b f Susan Ann, by Lexington, dam Roxana, and Keene and Grissom's ch f Lida Grisson. The betting showed Foster (who had won the Lombard Stakes at Jerome Park in a canter) to be a great favorite. In pools sold the night before in the city by Dr. Underwood, Foster brought $320; Lida Grissom, $30; Ecliptic, $40; Finesse, $20; Susan Ann, $6; Preakness (the winner) $15. In pools sold between the favorite and the field, Foster brought $20 against $70. On the course Foster continued to be as strong in favor as ever, and the final betting was $100 to $40 on his winning. The last pool sold was as follows:—Foster, $700; Preakness, $100; Lida Grissom, $85; Ecliptic, $60; Finesse, $45; Susan Ann, $30. When the drum was tapped Lida Grissom rushed to the front, with My Maryland second, Ecliptic third, and the favorite next. At the first quarter Lida Grissom still led, with Ecliptic in her quarters, and Foster and Finesse the next pair. Preakness acting as whipper in. On the back-stretch My Maryland went to the front, with Finesse next, and Lida Grissom and Ecliptic at Foster's haunches. They ran thus past the half mile pole and along the lower side to the head of the stretch, where Mr. Belmont's filly showed prominently in front, with Foster second, My Maryland third, and Ecliptic fourth. As the horses went under the string on the first mile, in 1:51¾, Finesse was a neck ahead of Foster, whose backers were highly exultant at the prominent position he then occupied, My Maryland third and Ecliptic and Preakness next, and Susan Ann sixth. The latter now went up, and, passing her horses, was second to Finesse at the quarter pole, the latter two lengths ahead. Foster was third at this point, but his rider, Palmer, had to rouse him with the whip to keep him going. On the back-stretch Preakness began to move through his horses, passing them in succession, and at the half mile he was second to Ecliptic, who had assumed the lead, Finesse being third and Foster fourth. On the lower stretch Susan Ann looked formidable, and as the horses swung into the stretch it was evident that the race laid between Ecliptic, Preakness and Susan Ann, Finesse, Foster, Lida Grissom and My Maryland being disposed of at this point. A splendid struggle up the home-stretch ensued between Ecliptic and Preakness, but the latter, ridden with the same admirable patience, judgment and skill which distinguished his jockeyship on Lancaster in the Saratoga Cup of 1868, bore the blue jacket and cap of Mr. Sanford triumphantly in the van, and won the rich Dinner Party Stakes of 1870 by a length. Ecliptic was second, and Foster, by dint of sheer gameness, third, beating Susan Ann by a head only. The latter was fourth, Lida Grissom fifth, Finesse sixth, and My Maryland, who was pulled up, last. Time of the race, 3:47¾. Value of the stakes, $18,500.

There is a singular appositeness in Mr. Sanford winning the first Dinner Party Stakes at Baltimore, for he was himself the originator of the race. At a dinner party given by that gentleman at Leland's Hotel, at the Saratoga Meeting of 1868, to a few prominent turfmen, he suggested, with a view of encouraging Governor Bowie in his efforts to build a new race course at Baltimore, that a stake should be opened, to be entered for by all present, to be called the Dinner Party Stakes for three year olds, $5,000 each, half forfeit, two miles. The subscription was reduced to $1,000 each, half forfeit, and the following gentlemen subscribed to it:—Messrs. Bowie & Hall, Sanford, O'Fallon, Withers, R. W. Cameron, and Denison & Crawford. On the fact of the stake being opened becoming known, there was a general desire among turfmen to enter for it, and thus co-operate in the effort to restore racing in Maryland. The result was the stake was re-opened by the general consent of the original subscribers, and thirty entries were made. Subsequently, at Mr. J. S. Watson's sale of racing yearlings, under the genial influence of Snooker and Old Crow, two other stakes were opened, appropriately called the Breakfast and Supper stakes, the former for four year olds and the latter for two year olds, and were well filled, it being understood, that with a view of assisting the Maryland Jockey Club in their initiatory movement, no money should be added by the association to either of the three stakes. Such was the origin of the Dinner, Supper and Breakfast stakes. Mr. Sanford did not back his colt, for he believed he was short of work, having fallen lame at Saratoga, and been laid up until he had gained a great deal of flesh. Beyond a couple of pools amounting to about $1,000, which he bought for his stable boys, and a bet of $300 against $2,200 on his colt, which he took of Mr. John Cotheo, Mr. Sanford won nothing but the stakes, but they amounted to the handsome sum of $18,500. His banker's account was also credited with the $5,000 forfeit on the Stamps and Narragansett match the same day. The followers of Capt. Moore's stable fell heavily, for the easy style in which Foster had won the Lombard Stakes at Jerome Park made this race look like a certainty. The horse apparently lost all his speed, and this is to be attributed to working him on the heavy, clayey track, after his arrival at Pimlico, which had in some degree strained the horse's muscles. Ecliptic ran a good, game mare, and surprised those who maintained that Eclipse could not get a colt or filly capable of staying over two miles, although the performances of Rushland and Reformation stared them in the face. Preakness had never run before, and was, consequently, a dark horse. He is of the famous Bayleaf stock and a full brother to the family of Busy B's, Beacon, Bayonet, Baywood and Bayflower, by the "King of Stallions," old Lexington. Mr. Chamberlain's filly Susan Ann ran well, and, had not Foster beat her by a short head for third place, he would have won the $1,500 bet that he had with Mr. Belmont between his filly and Finesse on this race. Summary:—

for a purse of $750, for three year olds that had not won a single race of $1,000 or over during the year, to carry 100 lbs., had eight runners. These were Lady Fetry, Ortolan, Hanover, Ensign, Conductor, Denis Burns, Hilarity and Mozart. The betting was $100 to $75 on Mozart, $160; Conductor, $150; Hanover, $65; Ortolan, $55; Conductor, $160; field, $55. In the first heat the race lay entirely between Mozart, Lady Fetry and Ortolan, the latter, at the finish, winning by a length, Lady Fetry second, Mozart third, Hilarity fourth, Denis Burns fifth, Conductor sixth and Hanover distanced. Time, 1:49½. In the second heat, Ortolan sold for $85; Conductor, $80; Lady Fetry, $60, and the field, $35. Denis Burns made the running at a good pace for three-quarters of a mile, with Mozart second and Conductor next. At the head of the stretch Conductor went to the front, and won the heat easily by two lengths from Ortolan. For the third heat only Ortolan and Conductor started, all the rest, not having won a heat, going to the stable. The betting was $150 to $30 on Conductor, who won, after a fine race, by two lengths, in 1:55. Summary:—

SECOND DAY—WEDNESDAY, OCT. 26TH.

HARRY BASSETT WINS THE SUFFER STAKES, AND BI-KADER THE MONUMENTAL CITY HANDICAP, EDENTON THE SELLING RACE, AND GLENELG THE HALF MILE DASH.

The weather on the morning of the second day was not auspicious, for heavy clouds obscured the sun and gave threatening indications of rain. Fortunately it held off, and during the afternoon the sun occasionally burst through his cloudy veil and peeped down to witness the sports of the turf in progress below on the Pimlico turf. Again was there a large and brilliant assemblage of fashion and loveliness on the grand stand, and the association were in extacies at the success which has attended their efforts to revive the turf in their state.

THE SUFFER STAKES,

for two year olds, $100 entrance, half forfeit, one mile, had twenty-five entries, but the superiority of speed shown by Col. McDaniels' chestnut colt Harry Bassett, a son of Lexington and Canary Bird, in his races at Saratoga and Jerome Park, frightened away all opposition except Mr. Sanford's filly Madame Dudley, also a Lexington out of an imported mare, who had won the two year old race at the last Jerome Park meeting. The betting between the two at the odds was lively. Bassett at first brought in pools $600 to the filly's $300, but before the start he brought $230 to $110. The filly took the lead and was about two lengths in front at the first turn, where her jockey called her back and allowed Harry Bassett to take the lead and the pole from her. The colt led an open length at the quarter, but her jockeyship got on even terms with him on the back-stretch and a pretty race ensued to the three-quarter pole, where both were lapped. Turning into the head of the stretch, the rider of Madame Dudley went wide on the outside, leading at least three lengths by doing so. This gave Bassett a commanding lead, which he retained home, although the filly gained very fast on him, but she was beaten by three lengths at the finish. Time, 1:48¾. Summary:—

SECOND DAY.—WEDNESDAY, OCT. 26TH.—PURSE RACE.—Sapper Stakes, a sweepstakes for two year olds; one mile; $100 entrance, half forfeit.

Time, 1:48¾.

SOUTHERN MARYLAND CITY HANDICAP,

two miles, for all ages, $50 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added by the Maryland Jockey Club, had eight entries and four runners—Mr. Doswell's Minister and Abd-el-Kader, Keene Brothers' Bi-Kader and Gen. Perry's Crown Prince. The betting was $100 to $35 on Doswell. Minister cut out the work at a strong pace for the first mile, with Gen. Dougherty on her back, and Abd-el-Kader in waiting a length behind, the others being content to accept second places from the start. As the horses went under the string on the first mile Minister was leading a length, with Abd-el-Kader a neck in front of Gen. Dougherty. The latter had now shot her bolt and began to fall back, leaving Mr. Doswell's pair to fight it out between them. Abd-el-Kader assumed the lead from Minister on the last quarter and came home a winner by three lengths, Minister six lengths before Gen. Dougherty and Crown Prince, the pair behind them. Time, 3:52.

SECOND RACE.—Mounted City Handicap, two miles, for all ages; $50 entrance, half forfeit; Maryland Jockey Club to add $1,000; $200 to first horse, $200 to second horse.

Time, 3:52.

THE SELLING RACE,

two miles, for all ages, one mile and a quarter, had three runners—Edenton, St. Patrick and Glencoe, Jr. The betting was $300 to $25 on Edenton. Edenton made the running, with St. Patrick second and Glencoe last, outpaced from the start. A pretty race about the back-stretch and the third quarter was witnessed between Edenton and St. Patrick, but after they turned into the home stretch it was clear that Edenton had the race in hand, for he was running easy, while St. Patrick was driving. Edenton won cleverly by a length, Glencoe, Jr., beaten off. Time, 2:19¾.

SAME DAY.—Selling Race, $500, for all ages, one and a quarter miles; horses to be sold for $1,500 to carry full weight; $1,400, allowed five pounds; $750, allowed seven pounds; $500, allowed fourteen pounds.

THE BREAKFAST STAKES,

for four year olds, two miles and repeat, $300 each, half forfeit, had twelve entries and two runners—Mr. Belmont's b c Glenelg, and Mr. Babcock's ch c Helmbold. The betting between them was even and very heavy. In the first heat Helmbold made the running at a steady but not fast pace, Glenelg trailing behind. On the second mile the latter closed up a little, but settled until they entered the home-stretch, before he made his effort. Half way up Glenelg collared Helmbold, and despite the latter's exertions, beat him home by a length in 3:48. The betting was now $100 to $30 on Glenelg, who made a waiting race as before until within a hundred yards of the string, when he challenged, and after a most exciting finish won by a short head. Time, 3:48½. So close was the contest that most people thought it a dead heat.

SAME DAY—Breakfast Stakes, for four year olds, two miles and repeat; $300 entrance, half forfeit. Closed with twelve entries.

A. Belmont entered b c Glenelg, by Citadel, dam Bapta	1 1
W. R. Babcock entered ch c Helmbold, by Australian, dam Lavender	2 2

Time, 3:48; 3:48½.

The Great Sixty Mile Race Against Time.

In a recent issue we gave the result, by telegraph, of an attempt made by Neil Coker to ride 60 miles in three hours at San Pedro Springs, Texas, last month, but the time given therein, as well as the date and name of the rider, was wrong. We are now enabled to present full details of the affair, taken from the San Antonio Herald of Oct. 12th:—

Some two months ago the Agricultural, Stock Raising and Industrial Association of Western Texas offered a special premium of $50 to the first and $25 to the second winner in a sixty mile race around their track at San Pedro Springs, provided that the distance was made in three hours. None but Texas raised horses and Texas made saddles were to be used, and the race was to come off during the holding of their fair, from the 5th to the 8th of Oct. On the morning of the day not a single entry had been made and the directors were in despair. However, before 11 o'clock Neil Coker appeared upon the grounds with twelve cow ponies, and declared it his intention to contest for the prize. Neil Coker was born and raised in Bexar county, is about twenty-two years of age, weighs somewhere between 125 and 135 pounds, is a likely, active young man, a fair type of our stock-raising community. We examined his twelve horses and found them in very good condition, and it was believed he could win the race, no one was willing to loan him a good horse, and of the eleven and one mules which he had, it is safe to say that not over three had ever eaten a mouthful of corn in their lives. The track is only half a mile, is entirely new, and was merely prairie, badly plowed and but slightly harrowed, with no attempt at filling up the holes or leveling down the hills. The track is oval in shape, with four sharp curves, which makes it difficult to bring an untrained horse around the corners.

With all these difficulties and this kind of stock, at the tap of the bell, promptly on time, young Coker mounted his first pony and applied his first dose of "Texas quirt." The first four horses he rode ran half a mile each, and he made his change in from 10 to seven seconds. The fifth horse, a noble grass raised animal belonging to I. P. Simpson, Esq., of this city, carried him 1 mile in 2 min. and 10 sec.; this was excellent time, but he was so hard to take up that he passed the stand fully 5 yds., coming the rider a great deal of needed strength, and 15 sec. of good time. Nothing special occurred up to the 8th, when an ungovernable mustang flew the track altogether, and made a circuit down through the woods; meeting the San Pedro irrigating canal, he turned back through the Agricultural Department, leaped an 8-horse power threshing machine and, finally, despairing of making his escape, tried his "level best" to pitch young Coker over his head, but this his attendants reached him with another horse; he got back into the track and proceeded on his way. About the 13th mile another horse broke on the other side of the track and came very near jumping a stone wall. He was finally brought to a full stop, but considerable time was lost. With all these mishaps, at the end of 30 miles young Coker was 2 min. ahead of time. The Marshal, General Young, made this announcement in a voice that could be heard for half a mile round.

The crowd now began to get excited, and a universal shout went up for more and better horses. Men who had refused the use of their horses and scoffed at the possibility of such a race, began to believe he would make the trip. General Knox, Captain Story, Wm. H. Jackson, President of the Association, and I presume at least fifty others, exerted themselves in procuring better horses. Captain Wm. H. Elliott brought in his splendid black stallion, that made his mile in a little over two minutes. Mr. A. Oliver and Mr. McClean stripped the harness from their horses and brought them in. By this time the excitement was so great that every horse on the ground, no matter what his value, was at the service of the young and gallant rider. Gentlemen with gold headed canes, kid gloves and fine linen, would strip their horses, and, bringing them in, scream at the top of their voices, "Put him through if you kill him." From this time on, young Coker's fortunes smiled upon him. He now made on each horses' race time only, a mile and a half, and made his changes nearly even in ten seconds. It was now evident to all that, without an accident, he would win the race, and every man, woman and child on the ground was wrought up to the highest pitch of excitement. Sedate old judges lost their dignity and hurrahed at the top of their voices, the ladies waved their handkerchiefs, children screamed and young Coker gained on his time every round. Finally, the Marshal tapped the bell, as the last mile was made, and announced "Sixty miles in two hours and fifty-three minutes." At this young Coker exclaimed:—"Let me give them another mile for good measure;" and, with an eye as clear as an eagle's, and limbs as lithe as the mountain doe's, he mounted a fresh horse, and made his sixty-first and last mile in two minutes and fifteen seconds.

He was taken up into the judges' stand and introduced by the marshal; and that the crowd might have a chance to do something for him, a prominent banker of this city pulled off his hat and called out, "All who wish to do something for the young man, here's a chance." The last we saw of him his hat was well laden with gold and silver, which was given to Coker, in addition to the premium of the association. We understand it is the intention of the society to present him with a champion belt, spurs or cup, to be the property of the champion rider west of the Colorado river, open to all competitors under the supervision of any incorporated agricultural association. And next year they intend to offer a liberal purse for a hundred mile race to be made round the track at the San Pedro Springs, near this city, in five hours.

SECOND DAY, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 26TH.

MEDOC WINS THE 2:29 PURSE—THE RACE FOR THREE YEAR OLDS POSTPONED.

The morning of the second day opened very gloomily, indicating rain, but notwithstanding this some five hundred spectators visited the grounds. The heavy shower which fell the previous night, however, placed the track in a heavy condition, and caused a postponement of the match race for $1,000, between F. McCudy and Dan Mace's three year old fillies. This cut down the sport to but one race, that for 2:29 horses, for which there were seven starters. Of these Prince was a hot favorite prior to starting, and his backers have cause to lament the confidence they reposed in him. The distancing of New Berlin Girl, Dreadnaught and Western New York in the first heat occasioned much surprise, and was due in a great measure to the heaviness of the track. We present the summary:—

SECOND DAY, Oct. 26.—Purse of $1,000, for horses that had never beaten 2:29; $700 to the first, $200 to the second, and $100 to the third; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

Double Team Race for $5,000.

JESSIE WALES AND DARKNESS BEAT KIRKWOOD AND HONEST ALLEN.

Arrangements were made sometime since for a double match for $5,000 between those celebrated teams, Jessie Wales and Darkness, of Boston, and Kirkwood and Honest Allen, of the metropolis, the first of which was decided at the Beacon Park, near the Hub, on Monday, Oct. 24th. The reputation as fast trotters which the competing spans had gained in previous races had the effect of creating much interest, and there was an unusually large turn out of turfmen and others to witness the inaugural contest, embracing connoisseurs from different sections. Betting, prior to the start, ruled at odds of nearly 2 to 1 upon the Boston blacks, due to the fact that Kirkwood was manifestly not in proper form for racing, as was plainly evidenced while Dan Mace exercised him upon the track. On the other hand, Jessie and mate were in fine fettle and warranted the staking of such odds upon them. The judges consisted of Frank Ricker, of Brighton; David Blanchard, of Boston, and Geo. Bailey, of Portland. Between 2 and 3 o'clock the horses were called up for the First Heat.—Again and again did they score before the word was given, Darkness and Kirkwood contending for cutting up capers, but finally they got off, with the Boston pair, who had the pole, leading by about half a length, and at the quarter pole were a couple of lengths in front, Kirkwood having left his feet, but recovered quickly. On the next turn, however, he broke again and very badly, for here he was brought down to work again the blacks had opened a long gap and at the half-mile pole they were a distance ahead. It seemed as the race progressed that it would be decided by this heat, but that way up the home-stretch Darkness broke, which enabled the New York pair to save their distance when, Jessie and mate crossed the line in 2:36¼.

Second Heat.—They were away at the first attempt, the start being a most excellent one, but the blacks quickly assumed the foremost position, which they retained easily until the finish, leading by a couple of lengths at the quarter, which they had increased to six at the half, and ultimately winning very handily by about five lengths in 2:42¾. The New York team broke repeatedly.

Third Heat.—The character of the previous heats—the slow time in which they were trotted, and the evident unfitness of Kirkwood—naturally caused the interest in the race to die out, and offers of any odds upon the Hubbies failed to find a taker. At the third call a good send off was secured, the favorites at once cutting out the pace, and assuming a commanding lead while going around the turn, where Kirkwood again behaved badly. At the quarter Dobie's team were two good lengths in advance, though this gap had been reduced to one length at the half. The New York team trotted well along the roadside stretch, but could not overtake the leaders, who won it by some three lengths in 2:33¾. We give the summary below:—

BEACON PARK, BOSTON, Oct. 24th.—Match $5,000; mile heats, best three in five.

Dobie's blk m Jessie Wales and blk g Darkness					1	1 1
Dan Mace's c c s Honest Allen and br c Kirkwood					2	2 2
Time, 2:36¼; 2:42¾; 2:33¼.

RULED OFF.—It will be recollected that at the meeting of the Nashville Blood Horse Association, held last month, E. A. Smith, of Cincinnati, entered Regent in a 2 in 3 race, and that said horse was distanced in the first heat, under circumstances, which, combined with the known speed of the animal, gave rise to the impression that collusion and fraud had been practiced in the matter. No positive proof could be brought to show that such was the case at the time, but at a meeting of the Association held on the 22d ult., the affair was discussed and a resolution passed ruling Smith off the Nashville Course, which of course prevents him ever again appearing upon any track embraced in the Turf Congress.

WM. WOODBURY, the professional trainer and driver, is to take a benefit at Beeson Park, Boston, on the 1st of November.

OCEAN RACE BETWEEN THE SAPPHO AND DAUNTLESS.

THE SAPPHO TRIUMPHANT.

A race, which will doubtless constitute the final important event of a season of unprecedented brilliance in the annals of American yachting, came off on the turbulent bosom of old ocean on Tuesday, Oct. 25th. We allude to the great race between the far famed schooner yachts Sappho and Dauntless, rivals for the champion's wreath, which had been looked forward to with a degree of interest second only to that taken in the contest for the Queen's Cup in August last. The course sailed over was from a point about seven miles east by north of the lightship, twenty-five miles to windward and back. The question of time allowance was waived by the owner of the Dauntless, who stipulated only for a good eight-knot breeze, which they were fortunately favored with, there being nothing to complain of in this or any other respect from start to finish. The tonnage and area of the vessels was as follows:—

Name.	Rigged by	Tonnage.	Area.
Sappho	William Doughas	274.1	3,134.9
Dauntless	J. G. Bennett, Jr	301	3,269

Arrangements having been completed, the signal was given from the Seth Low, which had been engaged to act as stake-boat, and the yachts went away, passing the line to a flying start, as follows:—Dauntless, 8.47:39; Sappho, 8.52:56. The Dauntless headed to the southward on the starboard tack, followed by the Sappho on her lee quarter. For the space of about twenty minutes they remained thus, when the Sappho commenced to decrease the distance between them. At 9.18 the Dauntless went about, and in about five minutes later her opponent followed suit, and beating well to windward, gradually overhauled the Dauntless, when the excitement became intense to those favored with a view of the struggle. The latter tacked at 10.09, the Sappho heading towards the Jersey shore, but likewise tacking a couple of minutes after, holding a position well on the weather bow of the Dauntless. They continued on this stretch for some three quarters of an hour, when both stood out from the shore, pursuing this course for about an equal length of time, tacking again within a few seconds of each other, the Sappho first, at 12.42, the latter having secured a good lead. The stake-boat was rounded in the following time:—

Sappho	12h. 55m. 18s.	Dauntless	1h. 09m. 00s.
Dauntless	1h. 03m. 05s.	Sappho	1h. 09m. 30s.

The breeze had freshened since the start, and, with all the canvas which the vessels would bear spread, they dashed forward toward the goal, though, from the commanding lead which the Sappho had secured shortly after starting on the run homeward, it was seen that the race was virtually at an end. However, the Dauntless, bowling along beautifully, managed to diminish the distance between her prow and the stern of the Sappho considerably, the latter, however, winning by a long distance, the home boat being reached as follows:—

Sappho	3h. 35m. 05s.	Dauntless	3h. 50m. 15s.

The actual distance sailed by the competing vessels did not fall far short of seventy miles, and the time made was most excellent, the yachts well sustaining their high repute as fast sailers.

YALE AUTUMN RACE.

The annual fall regatta of the Yale Navy was held on Lake Saltonstall, near the City of Elms, Ct., on the afternoon of Saturday, Oct. 22d, over 2,000 spectators being present. The opening race was for double sculls, 2 miles, for two silver cups, and the starters were as follows:—

University—E. D. Coonley, '71, and S. K. Howe, '71.

Lively Polly—C. S. Jelley, '71, and C. Curtis, '71.

The word was given inside, and at 5.12 P. M. the word was given and the boats started. Lively Polly moved towards the point on the east side, so as to secure a shorter course. After passing the point, the interest in the contest, what little there was, subsided. At length the Lively Polly appeared, but the University was not visible. The former rowed in in 16:59. The University did not come down, having given up the contest.

Second on the programme was a race in six-oared shells, 3 miles, for six silver cups, there being but two competitors, as below:—

Scientific.—Boykin (bow), Parke, Ganz, Cogswell, Smith, Davenport (stroke).

Sophomore.—Boyce (bow), Hemmingway, Thomas, Davenport, Day, Flagg (stroke).

The boats got off well together at 3.35, the Sophomores having the outside position. The Scientifics managed to secure a slight lead, but the boat being badly steered they were soon deprived of it, and the Sophs went gradually more and more to the front and had an excellent lead as they disappeared from view. They were not passed, but, on the contrary, had considerably increased their advantage after rounding the upper stake, ultimately winning by a long distance in 22:44¾. The time of the Scientifics was 23:13¾.

Next on the docket was a single scull race, 2 miles, for two silver cups, one chased and the other plain, the starters for which were W. C. Hall, '72; E. K. Troxell, '73; C. Irving, '73; S. Merritt, '72. The toss for choice of positions was won by the latter, who took the outside, Hall having the inside. Shortly after four o'clock they were sent off to a fair start, and kept on tolerably even terms while within view. When they re-appeared Hall had a good lead and the others were trailing. He finally won in 17:34¾; Dewing second, in 18:04¾; Troxell third, in 19:13, and Merritt last, his time being 19:29¾.

Now came the principal feature of the day's sport, being a race in six oared barges, 2 miles, for six golden charms in the shape of oars crossed. The competitors were as follows:—

Sophomore.—Allen, (bow), Webster, Myers, J. Brown, Wheelock, Oakley, (stroke).

Freshmen.—Manning, (bow), Weeks, Bailey, Harrison, Wickes, Bussing, (stroke).

Twenty seconds were allowed the Sophs., owing to their boat being much heavier than that of their opponents, considerable delay having been occasioned by their holding out for some time for ten seconds additional. At the send off the Freshmen obtained a slight advantage, which they held throughout, afterwards increasing it, but not sufficiently to make up for the time allowed their antagonists, who were declared the victors. The time was as follows:—Freshmen, 14:34¾; Sophomore, 14:49. The judges were:—E. D. Coonley, '71; L. E. Curtis, '72; C. A. Brinley, Scientifics. Referee, A. L. Clark. Starter, J. H. Ford, '71. Timekeeper, F. S. Wicks, '73.

HARVARD UNIVERSITY REGATTA.

While the students of Yale were enjoying themselves athletically upon the waters of Lake Saltonstall on the 22d ult., the members of the Harvard Boat Club were similarly engaged on the Charles river, Boston, a series of races having been arranged, which were open to all University oarsmen. A course extending from a buoy anchored a short distance above the Western avenue bridge to a boat stationed below the Brighton street bridge and return, had been chosen, but as it had not been measured no time was taken, the distance being about three-quarters of a mile. First came a race in single scull shells, for a silver goblet, for which three entered, viz.:—N. G. Read, G. H. Williams and W. F. Whitney. The former at once took the lead and won easily by half a dozen lengths, Williams second. The next event was for single scull lapstreaks, for a silver goblet and pewter medal to the first and second respectively. Seven competitors appeared, viz.:

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Oct. 31st, 1870.

THE CLOSE of the month of October and the eve of the opening of the last month of autumn reminds us of the approach of winter and its cold snaps, that make the very name of ginger snaps more than comfortable. Yes, full will shortly have a full, and with the advent of the early frosts the aged and decrepid may likewise expect a full. Around our piers, for the past few months, our peers have had too much of, owing to the disagreement of our ampul contractors with the Board of Health, it ap-pears. Well, everything must have a full some time or other. Lucifer had a full, Sam Patch had a full at the Genesee full, the people look for a full in the price of provisions, but the greatest of all falls is that of Niagara, of which a friend of ours recently remarked, on looking up at the cataract of waters, "How is those for high ?".....The immense turn out of the unterrified on the evening of Oct. 27th, prevented a great turn in at our places of amusement, and lonesomeness attested the infer ior attractions offered by the theatres when compared with the free show on Fourteenth street. But the theatres are doing fairly, notwithstanding the big excitement over the coming election. At Niblo's, the opera, we hope, is en-riching the management and pleasing the public. In fact, as a Hibernian friend of ours remarked, "all the theayters plazes," the only thing the patrons of our places of resort seem to lose sight of just now, and that is the orchestra; and yet there is really no difference between that department of a theatre and "the full strength of the company," as we shall prove, for

Between the actors and the band, whatever people say,
There is no difference, for both are bound alike to play.

.....And speaking of our musical friends, who, while teaching harmony to others, often manage to create discord among themselves—suppose we tinkle a little bit on the latest nigger song:—

A NIPPING AND A NIGGER AIR.
The last new song, called "Let Me Be,"
Musical fame declare
Is very much like "Shoo Fly," for
"There's music in the air."

.....Jim has had another growl up at his theatrical boarding house; his last complaint was about the leather like texture of the beefsteak his landlady had set before him for his frugal meal. James vows that if she ever dies he will have inscribed on her tomb, "Green be the tough above thee."..... We had to laugh yesterday, while reading the theatrical stuff in the Sunday papers, to see how great minds run in the same groove; for in several of those papers the same idea was observed cropping out in the notices of Bootha Theatre. Each had something to say about a certain individual who had been to see it play five nights out of six, or words to that effect. Some of the initiated might infer that those notices had originated in the theatre, or somebody had been to see the dramatic critics. The coincidence was odd, to say the least....The pantomime is still crowding the Olympic, and everything connected therewith goes along as smoothly as the management could wish. The boys are in raptures with all they see and hear, as may be gathered from what we heard a couple of them say one evening during the past week. Listen to the

ECHOES FROM THE OLYMPIC.
"I tell you what, Bill, that are scene's
Enough to drive one crazy;
I don't think Jim Hayes painted it,
It's too bright to be Hay."
"I don't b'lieve Fox made the show.
That's just betwixt us, Rockey;
I tell you why—it's most too fresh
And lively to be Fox'y."

.....It seems strange how very anxious some people are to "get in" with actors, minstrels, circus people and the like. Girls run after negro minstrels like they were made of candy; country lasses reach the height of their ambition when they tumble on a circus vaulter and he smiles on them. Even "Our Jim," who sees and knows so much about the profession, is forever hankering after these people. He has at last managed to "ring in" with a minstrel band of real niggers, but he makes us cry when you shall see him, with his banjo, go to them to his girl's abode to serenade her; but somebody there—probably the girl herself—did not seem to relish the dark visitation, for their hopes and themselves soon received a dash of cold water, and they beat an indignant retreat. The boy's black friends looked somewhat blue for a time, causing him to gracefully remark that he was sorry that their lay had put them in such a brooding way, and he hoped they would try again. But thereupon the leader of the band squelched him by replying, "Dis banjo isn't a going to sing no more, nohow. De lays am dangerous?" The lad was so completely layed out by this retort, that he had to go and layze his head. At least so he reported to us, and nothing layter has come in to contradict him.....How calm and peaceful it is when we leave the noisy streets and enter our sanctum to concoct those sentiments that scintillate like the rays that radiate from the spotless sun. (No, that won't answer; science has discovered that the celestial orb is no longer spotless.) And as we proceed in our sketches of things, our imagination, enlivened by the classic surroundings of our office—("The Tombs."—OUR JIM.) ideas trip each other in their eagerness to issue from our recondite occiput, dashing forth with unbridled fancy in their glee to be prematurely devoured in ink, and then laid out to dry, dear reader, for your delectation. Well, let them come. To reach the empyrean heights to which our managers have elevated (?) the drama—even though they make not one cent for tribute—is difficult and tight papers. What would we do without managers? And yet what would they do without the players? Aye, there's the rub, as Mister Hamlet so forcibly expresses it. And in this connection we may be pardoned if we dilate poetically upon the

ODDITIES OF ACTORS.
Of odd men, actors are most queer,
Of those who nightly roam—
They're forced to go upon the boards
To get their board at home;

And when upon them, and among
Their many traps and tricks,
We find among those of the boards
Some rather crooked sticks.

Sometimes, when not a manager
Would let them on the stage,
We find that they, if single men,
The ladies will engage.

And when bad houses make them poor
(Poor houses will not any fit)
Such houses are not for their good,
Though often for their benefit.

Then take comedians, you will find
A great deal more than half of them
Are proud of their positions, yet
The public only laugh at them.

But for them all we this can say—
And venture 'twill excuse—
That, when they follow Parks,
They follow, but comuse.

.....And now, as the "Man in the Files" has been on the anxious seat to get in his say upon the state of the drama and kindred subjects, we will, as hopeless candidates for office so often do, kindly withdraw in his favor:—

THE DRAMMY FROM A ARTISTIC STAND PINT.
BY THE MAN IN THE FILES.

"There's nuthin' like legger."—Shakespiler.

MISTER FRANK QUEER.—Sir.—Lookin over a noospaper this mornin, my attention was attract by the followin divertisement:—"Shapely ladies and gentlemen are wanted to appear in a new spectickal dramaze. Apply to the manager of the ——Theatre."

Arvin a curiousity to see ow this would opperate, and bein on terms with the individual in want, I took my position in a bar room opposit the stage daw, and awaited developments. Well, sir, the ladies and gentlemen began too come—fellers that travel on their shape, and wimmen that throw themselves in the paddin line, a regular army. One on 'em as was dissapinted inso hopeful relations, told me after a preliminary bl-oquor to set it open, that it would ave been engaged to some, only fourteenh in his left hoyve. All the applicants and applicantesses, e said, was put throo a formidable series o' questions by the manager; but e didn't see nothin, so far as I could larn, about the candidate's nodge or his wardrobe, such as Shakspire, Prinsipal or Rooshan. One on 'em on both asked if e knowed anything about the standard dramaze, replied promptly, "You bet!" E did, too, for e was up to it. At the Academy of Bowery, which e was a standard bearer in the profession. But it was all one—I couldn't pass the orgil, dause this parygraft about the kwalifikashons of actors made its appearance. I've been swoot by a brilliant idear. I means to open a theatrikle agency (no disparidgement to the regular shops), offerin a purspectus on shape:—"Wanted, a pooty gal with a greekan nose, blue eyes and a blondes hair. A lady only with a long waste and a majestic frown, may find immejit employment"; or, "A company of lively acrobats with well formed carves," &cksetter. Orfer, a cool ground floor, discount for "Shoeboy" parts. A nolitch of English no objection, but not indispensible. As Mister addises, and others realise ow much there is in a name call'd onto the boards. If I adn't ad as umg back and a pair o' crooked legs, I'd call myself Richard or Dolphin't a bit. But Richard's nose, if you noticed, was fixed for the Umpback of Noter Dammy, so I ad to leave the feeld. Wy, sir, sich was the ardor of my personal appearants onto the orcyster that the rapskallions alrus would larf and go on like ole Bailey whensever I showed myself, and the ort of "shoo, fly, go 'way," was alius sure to salewte me from the gal-ery. And wunts, won't I ad fixed myself up pooty for Benny Dick, in the play of "Rosie Adoo," a stagi man, with an ockey stroke, a stilte' in the parquette, fashioned alowed:—"Well, if them ain't the d——dest pair o' legs," and immejitly went into convulsions of larfter. The ojears busted likewise into a raw, and I peared, too, but it was with passion. I clenched my fist and stomped off, and I hain't bin afore the publick sense. I grind once an actor named Goggles, whom wore a artifishal nose, which nobody could tell the differants, but ones in nose owne off in the middle of is part and left in its place a idiocus orifice, at wich the orgeses would put and asked their money back. And another actor whom wore false teeth, usin pui ous in a chamber o' water to soak and left is denton room for a minnit, the cool boy Rest in, and bein thirsty and feelin a glass o' water on the dressin table, drank it orf, and threw the rest out ov the winder. Mi ii! there was a row! "This is serious," sed the manager; "what'll we do now, Mister Goggles?" "O, 'gainst no matter," said Goggles; "I guess I can play it through." And one shuperior gal with a chest as flat as a iron bord, wore false breast; but once wen she was dancing a pa de ducks or buzzum dropt down and stuck out in front till I thought sumthin orful had happened to her—only, of cores. On the other hand, dam glory is certainly desirable to the promulgation of genus or our players. They recall the langwidge of Hollefernies:—"I draweth on the thred or is verily there bleedeth a need or is appropriate." I abhor much phanatikl phanlaseams; such fackers of orthogrify, as to spake dout, fine, when e shud say doubt; dat wen e shud pronouns debt; self, cauf; half, hauf," exkseter. Sum acters illeustrate the dexcription of Antifolupus:—

"Along with them
They brought one Pinch—a hungry, lean fac'd villain;
A mere anatomy, a mountebank,
A thread-bare juggler and a fortune teller;
A needy, hollow eyed, sharp looking wretch—
A living dead man!"

And there used to be hole companies in the palmy days of the drahma that are best described in the langwidge of Puck:—

"A crew of patches, rood mechanicles,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls."

We are awl ov us perosed with delite Amlet's description of a ero:—

"Wat a peece of work is a man! Ow noble in reason, ow infinit in fakulty! in form, in moving, ow express and admirable! in action, ow like an angel! in apprehension, ow like a god! the beauty ov the world, the paragon of animiles!" that's middle like a nacter for you! But that was under the old regimy. Bim by a nacior to draw wil ave to be like the mons'er in the "Tempest"—"a monster with 4 legs and 2 voices; a most delicat monster." Som actors remind us of Prospero:—

"You do look, my son, in a mov'd sort, as if you were dismayed. Be cheerful sir." Others, like Speed's grandmother, are "moar hair than wit;" others mind us of one of Shargier's crosses—"a virtuous gentlewoman, mild and beautiful." And some actors is so accustomd to breakin their ingagements, their manadger might ixclaim with Doctor Caius—"By gar, he shal save he's soul dat he have no come!" But a troos, a troos. Yourn, STYVENS.

City Summary.

AT THE BOWERY THEATRE, on Oct. 24th, Miss Marion Fiske, assisted by her father, Moses W. Fiske, commenced an engagement, appearing in a sensational drama in three acts, entitled "Little Dick; or, the New York Bootblack," written for the young lady by M. W. Fiske. They have been well received and have given evident satisfaction to their patrons. The drama is a good one of its type, and afforded good scope for this display of the artistic abilities of either star. Miss Marion is a charming young girl, just budding into womanhood, with a form surrounded petite form, a sweet, pleasant face, a clear, distinct voice, and a deal of confidence, which, however, never becomes obtrusive. She had an excellent conception of Little Dick, the boot-black, and acted the character with a deal of spirit and naturalness. She has undoubted talent far above the average of young ladies of her age, and with care and attention to her profession will at no distant day become a popular actress. During the course of the drama she sang several songs effectively, which won the approbation of the audience. Of course she has faults, the most prominent among which is an inclination at times to hurry her speeches, which causes her to clip her words, and render others indistinct. Although this occurred but twice during the play, it should be remedied at once ere it unconsciously grows into a fixed habit. We would like to see her in plays of the Maggie Mitchell or Lotta school, as we think in them she would in due time excel. Mr. M. W. Fiske, an excellent actor, gave a very humorous impersonation of Teddy, an Irish servant, and introduced several songs which highly pleased the audience. The other characters of the drama were acceptably acted, there being nothing, however, to call for especial notice. The performance concluded with Charles Foster's drama of the "New York Burglars, or a Marriage by Moonlight," which achieved great popularity on its original production at this house some weeks since. The business, considering the political excitement which pervades all classes of society at present, has been excellent. On Friday evening Miss Marion Fiske received a benefit and appeared in an English version of the "Grand Duchess," sustaining the role of the Duchess, and M. W. Fiske acted as Fritz. This was followed by a play entitled "Molly Bear," in which both these artists appeared, and the performance concluded with Charles Foster's drama entitled the "Old Straw Man." On Saturday evening the first two pieces were repeated, and in addition the "Golden Farmer" and "Mose" were performed. For the present week a drama which achieved success in London, Eng., entitled "Duty, or the Mariner's Compass," and the "Game Cock of the Wilderness" will constitute the bill.

A VERY ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT of music, mirth, and mimicry has been offered the numerous patrons of the Globe Theatre during the past week. The fresh attractions has consisted of a portion of Colville's European Novelties, consisting of the French athletes, Mons. d'Atalie, the "Man of Steel;" M'lle Angela, the "Female Samson;" and the intrepid youth, Zephyr. Having commented upon their performances at some length on the occasion of their last appearance in this city, at Kelly & Leon's Museum, some time since, we can only add that they have lost none of the daring, grace, ease or skill which characterized their marvelous display of strength upon that occasion. In addition to these artists, the "regulars" have appeared in a variety of performances. The entertainment concluded with a farce by Add Ryman, entitled the "Court of Appeals," being a keen satire upon the manner in which justice is administered in some of the courts of this city. John Hart as the Judge gave us a piece of acting which would have been no discredit to the regular dramatic stage. Hughey Dougherty and Add Ryman as the counsel for the prisoners gave an amusing burlesque of lawyers well known at the Tombs Courts, and Master Barney, as a Dutch witness, made some amusing binnders, which convulsed the audience with laughter. The farce concluded with a Can-can by a number of young ladies, supposed to have been arrested for disturbing the peace. Upon the whole it has proved one of the most enjoyable olio ever produced in this city as a variety theatre. The novelties for the present week will be the debut in this city of Mr. J. G. Forde, an English artist who has won popularity in the various music halls of England by his monologue entertainment, which report pronounces filled with mirth and wit, delivered in a manner to which the most fastidious could not take exception. This gentleman's entertainment forms one of Colville's European Novelties. Mr. Josh Hart will also re-appear, after an absence from the boards of this city for some two years, in a burletta called the "Nymphs of the Carribbean Sea," in which he will sustain the character of Peanut Piecrust, the Yankee Sea Serpent. Mr. J. H. Milburn, who during the past week created such a favorable impression at the Theatre Comique, will commence an engagement here this evening, Oct. 31st, appearing in his songs and sketches.

HARRY RIDE, premiere danseuse, who has just concluded an engagement at the Globe Theatre, is prepared to accept engagements. Her address is in another column.

NILSSON returned to the city and gave, during the past week, concerts on Monday and Wednesday evenings, and a matinee on Saturday. M'lle Marie Kreba, a distinguished pianist, recently arrived in this country, made her debut at these concerts on Oct. 24th. M'lle Nilsson is announced to give her last concert prior to her departure for Boston, this evening, Oct. 31st, at Steinway Hall.

THE PARISIAN OPERA BOUFFE TROUPE closed the fifth week of their engagement at the Grand Opera House on Oct. 29th. On Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, likewise at the Saturday matinee, "La Grande Duchesse" was given, with Lea Silly in the role of the Duchess on Tuesday and Saturday evenings, and Celdine Montaland in the same role on the other evenings. On Wednesday and Friday evenings "Le Petit Faust" was presented with the same cast as on its original production at this theatre. Of the respective merits of these performances we have hitherto spoken at length, and we need only add that M'lle Montaland's personation of the Duchess seems to improve with each representation and she appears to have caught the true spirit of the character. A new prima donna, M'lle. Elsie Persini, has been added to the opera bouffe troupe performing here, and will make her first appearance this evening, Oct. 31st, in the role of Marguerite in "Le Petit Faust," which will be repeated on Wednesday and Friday evenings and on the remaining evenings of the week and Saturday matinee the "Grand Duchess" will be performed, with Montaland in the role of the Duchess, except on Saturday night, when Lea Silly will enact that character.

BROTHER CHARLES B. SMYTHE is to deliver a lecture in Masonic Hall, 13th street, on Nov. 5th (the 265th anniversary of the Gunpowder Plot), in aid of the American Free Church.

A SERIES OF COMEDY REVIVALS necessitated the withdrawal of the "Two Roses" at Wallack's Theatre on Oct. 29th. On this evening, Oct. 31st, that fine old English comedy entitled "John Bull" will be presented, with that attention to detail for which this theatre is renowned. It will be performed also on Tuesday and Saturday evenings. On Wednesday and Friday the "Serious Family" will be acted, and on Thursday evening "The Rivals" will be presented.

OMINOUS RUMORS fill the air with regard to Lina Edwin's Theatre. A reduction in the prices of admission was made some time since, and now a reduction of salaries has taken place, and, as is usual in such cases, the persons who are receiving moderate salaries have been the sufferers. If rumor be true, the salary list of this theatre has been too large from the opening, and although the company comprises many good artists, they do not work well together. This evening, Oct. 31st, Mr. Harry Beckett is to be added to the company, and in consequence the expense will be materially increased, and should he fail to attract increased audiences, we fear the season at this theatre will be much abbreviated. He will appear in the title role of the burlesque of "Aladdin." The business of the week has fluctuated from good to indifferent. The bill has consisted of the "Captain of the Watch," the farce of "Mr. and Mrs. Peter White," and the burlesque of "Sonnambula." Miss Mary Stuart re-appeared and played Mrs. Peter White in the farce above mentioned. She possesses rare comic abilities, which only need to be ripened and mellowed by experience to make her a great artiste. Considering her limited experience, her performances may be pronounced wonderful. Mr. Stuart Robson convulsed the audience with laughter by his clever performance of Peter White, in which he displayed much originality of thought and conception. His facial acting was excellent. In the burlesque, Mr. Harry Josephs played the Count Rudolpho, hitherto performed by Mr. Harry Jackson, from which we infer that the latter gentleman has withdrawn from this theatre. Mr. Stuart Robson will appear this week in his humorous impersonation of Capt. Crosstree, in the burlesque of "Black Eyed Susan," and Miss Lina Edwin will re-appear, and perform in both burlesques. Miss Eliza Weathersby closed her engagement at this theatre on Oct. 29th, and will rejoin the Lydia Thompson Burlesque Troupe. Harry Beckett will play only one week and will also rejoin the Lydia Thompson troupe. J. B. Donniker has retired from his position as leader of the orchestra, and Mr. William Withers, formerly at the Broadway Theatre, will hereafter fill the position. Mr. Leffingwell has become the stage manager, and will appear on Nov. 7th, in the comedy entitled "Billiards."

"LET ME BE," as performed by Johnny Queen and Billy West at the San Francisco Minstrel Hall, is making rapid strides in popularity. The music is of a higher order than that of "Shoo Fly," and consequently may not attain as wide spread popularity as that confusion. Birch, Wambold, Bernard and Backus have appeared in various specialties and maintained their high and well deserved reputation.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 643 Broadway, inserts his card in another column, to which managers and the profession are referred. He also states that communications referring to the Fox and Denier Pantomime Troupe can be addressed to him.

ENGLISH OPERA was inaugurated in this city for the season of 1870 and '71, at Niblo's Garden, on Monday night Oct. 24th, the performers are the cancelled portion of the "Grand English Opera Combination," under the direction of Mrs. Caroline Richings-Bernard, and the management of C. D. Hess & Co. The performances on the opening night consisted of Flotow's charming opera of "Martha," given with the following excellent cast:—Lady Harriet, Mrs. Caroline Richings; Nancy, Miss. E. Seguin; Lionel, Wm. Castle; Plunkett, S. C. Campbell; Teodor, the Seguin; Sheriff, Arthur Howell. The opera was creditably placed upon the stage, and as far as the solos and concerted pieces were concerned, the music was exceedingly well rendered. The orchestra lacked evenness at times, and the choruses were not quite up to the standard. Mrs. Seguin as Nancy bore off the palm in the spirituelness and excellence of her singing and acting, though Mr. Bernard was heard to advantage in his fine singing solos, especially in "Home Sweet Home," but her Martha lacks in warmth of style. Campbell was not in his best voice, but Castle sang very sweetly. The fair scene was the scenic feature of the performances. On Tuesday, the "Huguenots" was performed, with a cast which introduced six other artists of the company, showing its strength in leading singers. The cast was as follows:—Valentine, Mrs. Caroline Richings-Bernard; Marguerite, Miss Rose Hersee; Urbine, Mrs. Brockhaven Bowler; First Lady, Fannie Goodwin; Raoul, Wm. Castle; Marcel, Henri Drayton; Nevers, Albert Lawrence; St. Bois, S. C. Campbell; M. Retz, Arthur Howell, and Bois Rose, John Chatterson. On Wednesday, the "Marriage of Figaro" was performed, and on Thursday "Fra Diavolo," with "Trovatore" on Friday, and "Oberon" on Saturday night, the matinee on Saturday being marked by a performance of the "Bohemian Girl." The attendance on the opening night was large and fashionable, but on the remaining nights there was a decided falling off in the sale of tickets, owing, for one thing, to the election processions and meetings, and also to bad weather.

JOHN BROUGHAM has written a new play entitled "Honor," which he has sold to Edwin Adams. The same author has also furnished Walter Montgomery with a forcible, telling poem, founded upon incidents of the present European war, and, as we believe it is the intention of Mr. Montgomery to shortly give a series of readings in this and other cities, the public will be enabled to judge of its merits.

J. H. MILBURN, character artist and vocalist from the Alhambra Palace, London, Eng.; Charles Abbott's new trick pantomime, entitled "Hanky Panky, or the Lively Quaker and the Genii of the Enchanted Grotto;" Miss Rose Clyde and Miss Minnie Foster, have constituted the fresh attractions at the Theatre Comique during the past week. Mr. Milburn has achieved a decided success. He possesses a fine voice, thoroughly under control, a good appearance, and dresses with taste. His manners are pleasing, his gestures and general carriage graceful and easy, and he impressed the audience favorably from his first appearance. He sang "Cliquot" in the costume of a swell, and then rapidly changed to full evening costume and sang a very pleasing song called "She's as Good as Gold," after which he sang a comic song entitled "Sarah," in which he developed rare comic powers, his facial contortions being wonderful. He has been encored five or six times each evening. He is a thorough artist and a decided acquisition to the music hall stage of America. Miss Eloise Clyde has a good voice and pleasing appearance, but upon her first night her selection for her first song, that of the "Grand Duchess," was received coldly and critically received. In other songs she gave greater satisfaction. The pantomime is full of mirth and jollity, and the tricks, which are numerous, worked satisfactorily. We will not attempt to sketch the story of the pantomime and thereby anticipate the pleasure in store for the spectators. Suffice it to say that it is a very good one, and well placed upon the stage. Charley Abbott as the Clown was excellent, and may be regarded as holding a position, if not equalling George Fox, certainly closely akin to artistic merit. During the course of the pantomime he executes with a deal of skill an exceedingly difficult ladder dance. Mr. John C. Franklin, as Harlequin; Charles Cristde, as Pantaloon; and Miss Carrie Hanes, as Columbine, were all acceptable. George H. Coes, Lew Collins, F. Pankhurst, James Wambold and others, had characters which were well acted. Miss Minnie Foster made her first appearance on Monday evening, Oct. 24th, in a banjo solo and a song and dance. This young lady is a comparative novice, having only once appeared before the public, in Boston, Mass. She has an excellent voice, which she manages with effect; her figure is petite, and she has a pleasing face and an easy carriage. It would be unjust to harshly criticise her efforts at present, but we can say she has the elements of success, which only require experience properly develop. The selections she sang lacked novelty, and moreover placed her in direct comparison with artists of much experience. She was elegantly costumed in a black velvet suit. The stock artists appeared in a variety of special acts, to the satisfaction of the audiences. This evening, Oct. 31st, Sidney Franks, a comic singer of repute, who was brought to this country by Prof. Risley, will commence an engagement.

A COMPLIMENTARY BENEFIT is about to be tendered Prof. Risley, of Risley's Circus, in this city. The Professor has had a long professional career, in the pursuance of which he has visited nearly every portion of the civilized globe. Of late years he has turned his attention to management, and to his efforts the amusement patrons of America were indebted for the first Japanese troupe that visited this country. Many other excellent artists now performing throughout the country were imported by Mr. Risley. We trust the affair will be carried out successfully, that the addition to Mr. Risley's exchequer may be substantial.

HYATT FROST, the manager of Van Amburgh & Co.'s Menagerie and Circus, arrived in this city on Oct. 29th, after a season in the extreme northwest.

"LA ROSE DE SAINT FLOUR," a new comic opera by Offenbach, was produced at Kelly & Leon's Minstrel Hall on Oct. 24th, and was continued during the week. It met with success, and will continued upon the bills for some time to come. The "Kneelson Concert" has become very popular with the patrons of this hall. On Friday evening M'lle Nilsson was present, and thoroughly enjoyed Leon's clever burlesque of herself, which she heartily applauded. This act will be continued during the present week, and in addition Leon will sing "I'm No Fond of Dancing," the "Tea Party" and "Kitty from Cork." Business was quite lively at this hall the past week, and on Friday evening the sign, "Standing Room Only," was hung out at an early hour.

AT TONY PASTOR'S OPERA HOUSE during the past week a thoroughly enjoyable performance was presented. Among the various attractions offered, special reference may be made to the musical burlesque entitled "Robinson Crusoe," which achieved success. For the present week Miss Emma Alford, serio-comic vocalist and clog dancer, who came to this country with Professor Risley's Troupe, will constitute the fresh attraction. All of the old favorites will appear in the bills, and many of which are new. Miss Helene Smith will appear in a song and dance; Wild, Kerns, Seymour and Cummings, in their burlesque of the Ciodoche Troupe, will introduce a new and original Can-can; Tony Pastor will open a budget of new songs and sketches to the intense delight of the patrons of this house, with whom he is a great favorite, being compelled to respond to some seven or eight encores nightly; Johnny Wild and Frank Kerns will illustrate their celebrated act of "Fishing," and the Sisters Gorenfo will indulge in saltatorial exercises. A new drama of American life, entitled the "New York Bank Clerk," will conclude the entertainment.

A CLERGYMAN may make a couple one, but in a majority of cases a long struggle ensues before it is emphatically decided which is the one. Many of the other idiosyncracies of the marital state are effectively portrayed in the comedy entitled "Husband and Wife," at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, where it will continue to be performed for a limited number of nights longer, ere giving place to the success of last season, "Fernande."

GEORGE L. FOX'S most successful pantomime of "Wee Willie Winkie" enters this evening, Oct. 31st, upon the fifth week of its triumphal career. Notwithstanding the intense political excitement, which, at present, pervades all classes of society, and has unfavorable weather which prevailed many nights during the past week, it attracted full houses. Ars est celare artem was never better exemplified than by the performance of the clown by George L. FOX. The matinees are lavishly patronized by the little folks, whose merry chirping and prattling enhances in a great degree the pleasure of the audience.

"LITTLE JOHN SHEPPARD and Joseph Bineskin," a musical burlesque, written by Harry Meredith, played with success for some three or four weeks at Tony Pastor's Opera House, can now be had for representation in other cities by addressing its author, John F. Poole, as per advertisement in another column, who will furnish copies of the burlesque and the music score, and models and plots of the scenery.

THE LYDIA THOMPSON BURLESQUE TROUPE still continue to attract large audiences at Wood's Museum by a clever performance of "Lurline." The comedian, Mr. Hall, continues to grow in favor with the audiences nightly, and the dashing, spirited acting of the fair Lydia, assisted by the piquant Longmore and others, renders an evening's sojourn at this theatre very enjoyable. "Lurline" bids fair to hold possession of the boards for some time to come. At the usual matinees save Saturday, the burlesque of "Enoch Arden" continues to give satisfaction. This theatre is eminently adapted to burlesque, and Manager Wood has hit the popular taste by securing Lydia Thompson and her talented corps of artists. Miss Pauline Markham did not appear during a portion of last week, owing to a severe accident which befell her while out driving with a friend. She was thrown from the vehicle and sustained severe bruises about the head.

HARRY BIRMINGHAM, proprietor of the Eureka Dramatic Agency, 636 Broadway, inserts his card in the advertisement columns.

THE DE RUSHELL acrobatic and pantomime troupe can be engaged through Chas. Rushell, whose address is in another column.

Dramatic.

THE NEW YORK CIRCUS, in Fourteenth street, notwithstanding the outside excitement during the past week has done a good business. We are credibly informed that it is the intention of the management during the present season to produce a constant succession of novelties from week to week, and an agent now in Europe has carte blanche orders to forward the best attractions of the Continent. During the week, the graceful and daring rider, James Melville, and his son, Master Frank, have performed some startling acts of equestrianism. Don Leonti appeared on Monday evening, Oct. 24th, and was withdrawn after that night. The Australian Family of acrobats have appeared in gymnastic exercises, which have been enthusiastically received. M'me Rollande, bare-backed equestrienne, is a most fearless and pleasing rider. Conrad's trained dogs display a high degree of instinct in their various feats, and Lester, the contortionist, throws his body into a variety of grotesque poses. Robert Stickney, a great favorite and one of the most talented equestrians in this country, is nightly received with lavish plaudits. The Levantine Brothers, gymnasts, accomplish their feats with ease and grace, and the mirth of the evening is furnished by the veteran Joe Pentland and Williams, and we notice one very commendable point in their bon mots, which is brevity—long stories are tabooed. Nat Austin is the equestrian director. For the present week the following fresh attractions are announced:—Mr. Charles Fillis, the English equestrian, from the Royal Amphitheatre, Holborn, London, Eng., and Mons. Lozada, a Parisian juggler, from the Cirque de l'Imperatrice, who will make their first appearance in America this evening, Oct. 31st. On Nov. 7th M. Olivier, who brought the Cynocephalus to this country, will introduce a monkey which he says far surpass that in skill. It closely imitates all the acts and movements usually performed by star equestrians, and, in conjunction with a baby monkey, performs the same feats as Melville and James Robinson and their sons. On its recent appearance at the Amphitheatre, Holborn, London, Eng., the press of that city spoke of its performance in the highest terms of commendation.

PAUL PERCY, a youth of eighteen years, advertises that he wants to learn the business of Harlequin.

JOHN BOOTH'S DRAMATIC COMPANY commenced a brief season at the New Opera House, in Eau Claire, Wis., on Oct. 24th.

HARVEY'S NEW YORK COMPANY disbanded in Charleston, S. C., during the week ending Oct. 23d, lack of patronage being the cause. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon joined R. Dorsay Ogden's company in Augusta, Ga.

MR. JOHN TEMPLETON, the manager of De Give's Opera House, Atlanta, Ga., was presented on Oct. 23d, by his wife, who is professionally known as Miss Alice Vane, with a bouncing daughter.

MISS. MARIE LOE and her dramatic company closed a brief season in Lancaster, Pa., on Oct. 29th, and is billed for two nights in Lebanon three nights, commencing Oct. 31st, and in Reading three nights, Nov. 6th, 7th and 8th. The performers are the cancelled portion of the late "Grand English Opera Combination," under the direction of Mrs. Caroline Richings-Bernard, and the management of C. D. Hess & Co. The performances on the opening night consisted of Flotow's charming opera of "Martha," given with the following excellent cast:—Lady Harriet, Mrs. Caroline Richings; Nancy, Miss. E. Seguin; Lionel, Wm. Castle; Plunkett, S. C. Campbell; Teodor, the Seguin; Sheriff, Arthur Howell. The opera was creditably placed upon the stage, and as far as the solos and concerted pieces were concerned, the music was exceedingly well rendered. The orchestra lacked evenness at times, and the choruses were not quite up to the standard. Mrs. Seguin as Nancy bore off the palm in the spirituelness and excellence of her singing and acting, though Mr. Bernard was heard to advantage in his fine singing solos, especially in "Home Sweet Home," but her Martha lacks in warmth of style. Campbell was not in his best voice, but Castle sang very sweetly. The fair scene was the scenic feature of the performances. On Tuesday, the "Huguenots" was performed, with a cast which introduced six other artists of the company, showing its strength in leading singers. The cast was as follows:—Valentine, Mrs. Caroline Richings-Bernard; Marguerite, Miss Rose Hersee; Urbine, Mrs. Brockhaven Bowler; First Lady, Fannie Goodwin; Raoul, Wm. Castle; Marcel, Henri Drayton; Nevers, Albert Lawrence; St. Bois, S. C. Campbell; M. Retz, Arthur Howell, and Bois Rose, John Chatterson. On Wednesday, the "Marriage of Figaro" was performed, and on Thursday "Fra Diavolo," with "Trovatore" on Friday, ga Mitchell appeared on the 29th, in 'Love,' before the largest house of the season. She is under the management of Mr. E. F. Lowell.....Marie Seebach appeared as Mary Stuart on the 31st. High prices and a tendency to keep many away."

THEATRICALS IN ALBANY, N. Y. are thus reported by our correspondent, "Beppo," writing on Oct. 26th:—"Mr. Joseph K. Emmets closed his successful engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, on Oct. 29th, in his own drama entitled the 'Witches of New York.' He appeared as Royal Keene, a Tombs lawyer. He received very good support from Mr. Keeble as David Van Rensselaer, Harry Clifford as Joe Onward, Mr. Loveday as Isaac Abrams, Mr. Webster as Adolphus Lawrence, Mr. Knapp as Hartright, and Mr. McDall as Tom Bishop. Miss Rand appeared in the dual role of Sue Wilson and Susie, Miss Clifford as Mlle. Heloise, Miss Nellie Young as Clara Van Rensselaer, and Mrs. Goodwin as Jennie. Mr. Aiken did not draw very large houses with the 'Witches,' and last evening, 27th, the 'Ace of Spades' was placed on the stage. The attendance was this owing to the inclement state of the weather. This piece has much merit in it. This evening, Oct. 28th, the benefit and last appearance of Mr. Aiken will occur, and directly after the performance a full dress rehearsal of the 'Field of the Cloth of Gold' will be had. This burlesque will be produced for the first time on the 31st. In the way of scenery, properties and wardrobes, it is said to surpass anything ever attempted by a manager in this city. It will be played two weeks. Mrs. Stoddard appears as Earl Darbey, Miss Rand as Lady Constance, Miss Clifford as De Bassy, Mr. Clifford as King Francis, Mr. Furguson as King Hal, Mr. Loveday as Queen Catherine. On the 26th the comedy of 'Married Life' and 'Sketches in India' compose the bill, together with an olio, in which Mr. Street and Miss Young will sing a duet, Miss Clifford will do a fancy dance, Mr. Furguson will do his changes of a Lifeguard, Mr. Clifford will sing a comic song, and Little Susie Goodwin will sing 'Sat Grecian Bend,' a la Emmett. Tomorrow, for a matinee, 'Married Life,' Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collins withdrew from the company on the 26th. Mr. C. was a good actor and a gentleman. Mrs. C. was a very good utility lady.....At the Academy of Music Johnny Thompson has drawn very good houses this week. On the 25th Mr. J. H. Bowers left, and his place has been occupied by Mr. Wm. C. Crosbie as Tiger Bill. In this character Mr. C. achieved a success. Miss Kate Raymond as Moll Meddles appears to an advantage. On the 26th, for a matinee, 'Ben Bolt' and 'Quiet Family' were the attractions, Mr. Crosbie appearing as Reuben Rags and Barnaby Bibbs. In the former character he sang his popular song of 'Mutton Pies.' On the 31st Miss Josie Orton opens at this house in a new piece entitled 'One More Unfortunate,' supported by a full and talented company under the management of Mr. Geo. Ryer."

THE ZAVISTOWSKI SISTERS, who closed their engagement at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, on Oct. 29th, are spoken of as follows by the Boston Post of that date:

THE ZAVISTOWSKI SISTERS.—This troupe will conclude its engagement at the Howard Athenæum this evening. It has extended through the unaccustomed period of a full month. The sisters cannot be unknown to Boston except by accident, as they leave, it is pleasant to record, with a most excellent reputation as performers. Miss Emeline is unsurpassed by any artist in her line that has visited Boston in many years, and we doubt if her superior has appeared upon any of our boards. She embodies the spirit and significance of burlesque, clifted by nature with beauty of person, she adds to this talents both as a vocalist and actress. Her presence upon the stage is always most graceful, and is sure to elicit frequent and hearty applause. Boston has been pretty generously bestowed this season, but nothing and none have stepped Miss Emeline. Her sister, Miss Alice, is scarcely less attractive, though younger. She, too, is a light and sparkle upon the stage. The very enthusiastic manner in which she has been nightly received, shows that the public have justly appreciated her efforts. We trust that these young ladies may again appear before a Boston public at an early day. In the meantime Boston will retain for them a most pleasant memory, based most certainly upon the merit of a character beyond question.

A WALKING GENT, an old man and an agent are wanted by Manager, who advertises.

"MAN AND WIFE," adapted from Wilkie Collins' novel by W. T. Austin, was produced at Coates' Opera House, Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24th, and was played during the week. It was highly spoken of by the local papers. Mr. Charles Pope played Geoffrey Delamayn, and Miss Alice Gray, Annie Silvester. On Oct. 31st Miss Annie Tiffany is announced to commence an engagement.

OF AMUSEMENTS in Buffalo, N. Y., our correspondent, "Typo," writing on Oct. 29th, says:—"The Academy of Music has been well filled during the week; the attraction being the Kiralfy troupe of pantomimists and danseuses. 'Humpty Dumpty, Jr.,' was presented the first four nights, 'Jack the Giant Killer' on Friday evening, for the benefit of Mlle. Hanlola Kiralfy, and the same bill for the Saturday matinee and the evening performance. The Saxon infant troupe are the great card of this combination. Their pantomimes are produced in a manner strongly reminding one of the Ravels, and much better than could be expected of children of such tender age. The ballet comprises a number of master artists, and their graceful evolutions elicited universal approbation. In the pantomime of 'The Pearl of Tokay' Mons. Imre Kiralfy executed a change of dress in a most incredibly short space of time, calling forth great applause. Monday night, Oct. 31st, Harry Beckett's British Blondes, minus Harry Beckett, commence an engagement of one week, opening in 'Luna; or, The Little Boy who Cried for the Moon.'"

THE LARGEST GROSS RECEIPTS at regular theatre prices ever taken in Providence, R. I., and Hartford and New Haven, Conn., were received by Messrs. Lowell and Simmonds playing Miss Maggie Mitchell as the star attraction. They state the receipts to have been as follows:—At Providence, R. I., Oct. 24th, $1,122.85; 25th, $1,097.60; 26th, $1,121.80; at Hartford, Conn., Oct. 27th, $1,001.90; 28th, $1,040.50; at New Haven, Conn., Oct. 29th, $963.85; making the total for the six nights $6,336.30.

O'HARRA'S DRAMATIC TROUPE performed in Williamstown, N. Y., on Oct. 28th.

COLORED FOSTER CUTS for the "Rapparee," "Two Roses," "Twixt Axe and Crown," "Fernande" and "Frou-Frou" can be had from the Ledger job printing office, Philadelphia, Pa., who are prepared to furnish printing for all the latest theatrical sensations, and have on hand a large assortment of cuts suitable for variety halls, minstrels, etc.

THE BROKEN DIALECT and foreign actresses have departed, and English undefiled once more reigns. Seebach and Janauschek have left this city and its vicinity. When they first opened here we predicted their failure, and that, mind you, before the Herald so loudly proclaimed their "greatness, grandeur," and all that. Well, they have both failed to attract the people; and their managers are, probably, lamenting the result of their speculations in sackcloth and ashes. The Herald's long editorials availed nothing—another instance of "the mysterious influence" of that paper.

THE OPPOSING BLONDE TROUPES, with Henderson, Lydia Thompson and Markham in the one, and Sherry Corbyn, Eliza Weathersby and Beckett interested in the other, are, after a pilgrimage to the Pacific slope, back again in New York, the former having come out upper dogs in the fight, whilst the latter, owing to internecine difficulties, probably, disbanded as a full troupe, and now rely upon their individual resources. Would it be strange to see the two parties once more unite? The fatted calf would have to be killed in such an event, and the prodigal sons and daughters welcomed back to the fold with all the honors.

MR. AND MRS. BARNEY WILLIAMS commence an engagement at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore, Md., this evening, Oct. 31st. They have not acted in that city for several years.

W. A. ROYSE'S DRAMATIC COMPANY commenced a brief season in Warrensburg, Mo., on Oct. 24th, Miss Fanny Denham appearing in "East Lynne."

LISA WEBER'S BURLESQUE OPERA TROUPE commenced a brief engagement at the Chestnut, Philadelphia, on Monday, the 24th ult., and played during the week to fair houses. The following were the principal members of the troupe:—Miss Lisa Weber, Miss Bella Howitt, Miss Hattie O'Neil, and Mr. George Atkins. Brough's burlesque of "Ernani" was played during the early part of the week in an acceptable manner. The plot of the opera was to some extent adhered to in the burlesque, but of course there is a good deal of poetical license. Miss Lisa Weber as Ernani was admirable, alike in her singing, her dancing, and her delivery of many a sparkling line. Mr. George Atkins' performance of Iago was irresistibly droll, and his dancing was quite as good as his acting. Miss Belle Howitt as Don Carlos, and Miss Hattie O'Neil as Elvira, displayed a lively appreciation of the humorous dialogue entrusted to them. Byron's burlesque of "La Somnambula" was also produced during the week, and met with much applause. M'lle Fanny Janauschek commences a brief engagement at this theatre on Oct. 31st.

LIN FOX'S AMERICAN THEATRE, Philadelphia, the business for the past week has been uniformly good. The performance nightly given here is of great variety, introducing a large company. The performances last week commenced with an amusing sketch entitled "Man and Wife," in which Bob Harrison was irresistibly droll. Miss Millie Kilmeyer appeared in a favorite dance. Dick Sands gave his inimitable clog dance, and was much applauded. The Ethiopian sketch of "Sam the Poet" was very amusingly rendered by John Mulligan, Bob Harrison, Pendy and Young. Two new ballets, by George W. Smith, entitled "The Demon of the Night" and "The Village Apothecary," introduced the large and well trained ballet corps, led by M'lles De Rosa and Alexandrina. Sydney Franks sung several comic songs that met with approval. The French athletes appeared in their wrestling act. John Pendy gave a couple of very good songs and dances. John Mulligan and Bob Harrison were amusing in a new act entitled "Nitro-Glycerine Oil." The pantomime of "The Battle of the Pyrinees" concluded a very enjoyable entertainment. On Monday evening, Oct. 31st, Mr. G. W. Jester, the ventriloquist of "Man of the Talking Hand," will make his first appearance at this establishment. Mr. Robert Butler, the well known pantommist, also makes his re-appearance. The French athletes and Mr. Sydney Franks have closed their engagements at this theatre and left.

AT DE BAR'S OPERA HOUSE, St. Louis, Mo., on Monday, Oct. 24th, McKee Rankin opened in his own adaptation of "Rip Van Winkle," supported by Mr. John Dunn. Our correspondent, "Agra," writes us that "Mr. Rankin's rendition of the part is really creditable. The voice, make-up, expression and pose are like Mr. Jefferson's; and, I believe, were these two gentlemen to play the part on alternate nights, the public actually would not know which was which. McKee Rankin plays Rip well. Mr. John Dunn plays Derrick Van Brummel excellently, and good support is rendered by the stock company. The little children, Mamie Fairchild, Carrie McHenry and Florence Fairchild, deserve especial mention for playing Headrick Vedder, Rip Van Winkle, Jr., and Katchen, respectively. The piece will run the entire week. 'Little Em'ly' is underlined. Miss Kitty Blanchard is expected to appear next (this) week in 'Nanita.' Mr. Maurice Curtis, temporarily a member of the stock at this theatre, left for New Orleans on the 22d, to open at the St. Charles Theatre, being engaged for the second comedy. He was accompanied by Mr. Joseph Hamilton, who opens at the same place. On Monday, 24th, Mr. F. Gleason also left to assume the duties of treasurer, which position he has held under Mr. De Bar many years. On the same day Mr. W. T. Duncan took his departure, going to Omaha under engagement to Mr. Corri at the Academy of Music."

Musical.

MANAGER C. D. HESS, of the English Opera Combination, who had engaged the new hall of the Young Men's Christian Association in Pittsburgh, Pa., for a series of performances by that troupe, anticipating that he would have the opening of the hall, found on his arrival in that city that the Oratorio Society had deprived him of that privilege, and he consequently declined occupying the hall, and took his troupe to the Academy of Music, where the performances advertised were given. The hall committee maintain that it had not contracted to give Mr. Hess the opening of the hall, but simply rented it to him for one week. They commenced a suit against Mr. Hess, and a deputy sheriff was despatched to the Academy with instructions to wait the fall of the curtain and then serve the summons. However Hess got wind of the affair and mysteriously disappeared, much to the chagrin of the deputy. Mr. Hess took the accommodation train for East Liberty, and by a previous arrangement the Pacific express bound east stopped at this point and took him on board. What further action will be taken in the premises has not as yet transpired.

THE TREMAINE BROTHERS and John G. Pierson gave two musical entertainments in Bath, Me., Oct. 24th and 25th, and went from these to Addison.

THE QUEEN SISTERS gave a concert in Holcombe Hall, Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 27th, for the benefit of the sufferers by the recent flood.

A TENOR SINGER is wanted for Emerson's Minstrels. Address as per advertisement.

IN PITTSBURGH, Pa., our correspondent, writing on Oct. 28th, says:—"The Sappho Operetta Company appeared for the first time in Pittsburgh at the Academy of Music on the 24th inst. The entertainment given was an enjoyable one of the kind, but as it was of such a nature as to be particularly adapted to the tastes of women and children, the subsequent exhibitions given by the troupe were not largely patronized by the sterner sex. Florence Ellis, or the Infant 'Sappho,' is a prodigy. She displays remarkable dramatic talent and sings surprisingly well for one of her years. During the evening she appeared in the operettas of 'Fitted to the Life,' 'Tae King and the Keeper' and 'Lischen and Fritzchen,' and nearly every song she gave (if not all) was encored. Miss Lilla Rhea, an elder sister, sings sweetly and artistically, and is very pretty, but her manner on the stage is so stiff and affected as to materially impair her vocalization in the estimation of an audience. The other members of the company are only fair in their specialities. The merits of the combination can be briefly and truthfully given in these few words:—Sappho is almost the sole attraction of the troupe, and she is truly a gem."

THE ENGLISH OPERA TROUPE, comprising Mrs. C. Richings, Miss Rose Hersee, Mrs. Zelda Seguin, Mrs. Annie Inges, Miss Fanny Goodwin, Messrs. Wm. Castle, A. Bowler, S. C. Campbell, Henri Drayton, B. Bowler, E. Seguin, Arthur Howell and John Chatterton, will commence a brief season at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on the 14th of November.

THE IDA GILES CLUB will give their fifth annual concert at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st, when they will be assisted by a large number of volunteers. A fine musical entertainment is anticipated.

AN ORCHESTRA LEADER and a good arranger, not a manager, as stated in advertisement, is wanted for Dupree and Benedict's Minstrels.

P. J. WATSON, manager of Adelaide Phillipps' Concert Company, can be addressed as per advertisement.

SEVERAL MUSICIANS, who can play both brass and string, are advertised for by Ed. Firth.

MUSICIANS are wanted for Mack and Teal's Monarch Minstrels. See advertisement.

H. C. BARNABEE AND MRS. H. M. SMITH'S Boston Concert Troupe is announced to perform in Peoria, Ill., on Nov. 4th, and Quincy 7th.

OF MUSICAL AFFAIRS IN CHICAGO, ILL., a correspondent writing on Oct. 28th says:—"At Crosby's Opera House on the 20th and 27th he Concordia Mænnerchor, the finest amateur musical association of Chicago, and in fact of the West, reproduced Mozart's splendid opera of the 'Magic Flute,' for the benefit of the families of the killed and wounded soldiers of faderland. Both performances were witnessed by large audiences, and gave great satisfaction. The soloists acquitted themselves well, but to Mrs. Clara Buck, of Chicago, who sang the difficult role of Tamina, and to Mr. Fritz Foity (Papageno) were the chief honors awarded. Both are possessed of dramatic talent of the highest order, while Mrs. Buck is gifted with a really superb soprano voice of great power and exquisite purity. The performance, as a whole, was equal to that of any professional troupe we have had here, and Mr. Grosscurth, the conductor, had every reason to be proud of his splendid orchestra and chorus."

OF MUSICAL AFFAIRS IN BUFFALO, N. Y., our correspondent, "Typo," writes on Oct. 26th as follows:—"Our citizens were treated to such a feast of music this week as is seldom vouchsafed to Buffalonians. The Berger Family Swiss Bell Ringers appeared at St. James' Hall on the evenings of Oct. 25th, 26th and 27th. Owing to inclement weather I regret to state that the audiences were not very large; still the troupe played to fair houses. Every member seems to be an artist and capable of performing in almost any instrument. The sweet music of their bells will long linger in the ears of their auditors. Sol Smith Russell, the humorist, made his first bow to a Buffalo audience and was received with great enthusiasm, being encored several times at each appearance. His 'Widow Jones' and the 'Dutch Girl' were extremely ludicrous and brought down the house. In short, this gentleman is the great card of the troupe, which, under the able management of Mr. E. P. Kendall, is meeting the success it deserves."

ADELAIDE PHILLIPS, assisted by Sig. J. Leoni, tenor Herr F. Boscovitz, pianist, and J. Levy, cornet, gave one grand concert in Harrington's Opera House, Providence, R. I., Oct. 28th.

Variety Halls.

BURNING A SALOON SINGER.—On the evening of Oct. 20th the frequenters of No. 59 St. Charles street, New Orleans, La., experienced a sensation not down in the programme. Annie Barbiere, a waiter girl and singer in the New Eldorado, had been on the stage singing and had stepped behind the scenes a moment or so with one or two other persons, who seem to be at present unknown. As she was passing out into the main room her face was made of jute or ramie, broke into a blaze, covering her head and face with a fierce blaze, which burned her so severely that she can never recover from the effects. So sudden was the transaction, and so frightful the sight, that every one who beheld it stood aghast with horror. Only one person had sufficient presence of mind to offer a particle of assistance, Mr. John Leonard. The poor girl wears but little natural hair, has a peculiar face, is rather good looking when fancifully dressed, and usually finds more favor from customers than most of the girls in that establishment. She had been employed there only a few nights, and perhaps excited the ire of those less gifted in her profession. The police were unable to arrive at any definite conclusion as to who the miscreant was to perpetrate so heathenish a crime, nor could it be ascertained how it was done. Annie was not questioned, as her intense sufferings prevented her making any statement, and it is likely she can no more than conjecture who is so bitter an enemy as to try to burn her to death. When in the beer-room she always wore a long dress, but when on the stage she took that off, wearing a fancy dress beneath. It is said that she is married, and conducts herself becomingly while at work. She was taken to her room and properly cared for. Dr. Gessner Harrison was hastily summoned while attempting to pull the flaming wig from her head. It is possible he knows who the guilty party is and will inform on the vile culprit. How the blaze was set is not known.

AT TAMMANY HALL, Bay City, Mich., the chief attraction for the past week has been Charles Adams, Dutch and negro comedian; Frank Wood, heavy song and dance; the Howard Sisters, J. Bucklin, Mazori, Arnoldi, Anne Sherwood, Alice Chiriski and Little Jiminy.

JAMES TAYLOR, "English Royal Comedian," has just finished a successful tour through New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and performed in Portland, Me., on Oct. 28th and 29th.

CHARLEY SHAY'S MONSTER QUINCUELEXAL EXPOSITION is meeting with success in its tour through the New England states. The company is billed to perform in Hudson, N. Y., Nov. 8th; Albany, 11th, and Newark, N. J., 18th.

FROM CINCINNATI our correspondent furnishes the following intelligence, dating the 28th of October:—"Business has been rather slack at the different halls this week, owing partly to bad weather and partly to counter attractions. There has been little change in the Winter Garden company, which is now excellent. Last night (Thursday) Miss Minnie Warner and Miss Edith Forrest appeared for the first time. Minnie Warner has a very sweet voice and is pretty, and, with Nellie Anderson and Maud de Lisle, make an excellent band of singers. Harrigan and Rickey have another original act this week, entitled 'German Emigrants,' and also participate in a very amusing sketch, entitled 'Obeying Orders.' Miss Mollie Russell has been ill and unable to play for the past week, but has now recovered. The 'Three Fast Women of Cincinnati' continues to be the main attraction. Several new things are promised for next week. Harrigan and Rickey contemplate leaving for New York very soon.....Mlle. Blanche, danseuse, who also does a very fair song and dance, has been added to the Race street company, and La Rainford has quit. Miss Addie Sprague, vocalist, who has been with that troupe past two weeks, re-appeared last night and was warmly welcomed. The 'Peep at Cincinnati' still holds the boards, and the farce of 'Law vs. Mutton' has been given through the week, with Hen Mason as Lawyer Cheatem, Johnny Weaver as the Judge, Harry Wood as Old Snarl, and Frank Hawley as Sheepface.....At the Alhambra, the unadulterated can-can, and the four end men—Geo. Morton, Johnny Foster, Johnny Connor and Marsh Adams—together with Art Holston's ballads, continue to prove attractive cards. Miss Lu Rainford, danseuse, has been added to the company.....The Academy of Music and Jacoby's Hall, 'Over the Rhine,' are both flourishing, with companies formerly given."

AT THE FRONT STREET THEATRE COMIQUE, Baltimore, some of the money won at the Supper and Dinner Party Stakes of the Maryland Jockey Club passed through the hands of Mr. Lloyd, Manager Sinn's treasurer. The theatre every night during the week has been crowded with the gay gamboliers of the turf, representatives from all parts of the United States. An excellent programme was gotten up by Geo. R. Edeson. Kathleen O'Neil, Irish vocalist and actress, and the gushing blonde, Eva Brent, vocalist, opened on Monday, Oct. 24th. The voice of the former lady sadly trembled in her, as on several occasions she has been compelled to excuse herself and retire from the stage. Her reception, however, on each evening was good. Miss Eva Brent has all the sweetness and power of her voice intact, and her selections were rapturously encored. The new ballet, entitled the "Girls of the Period," en costume, has made a great hit. Edwards, Devere, Egan and Hodges, of the ebony department, have presented some new and racy specialities. Annette Galletti, premiere danseuse, has created a perfect furore. The Irish drama of "Ireland as it Was" has concluded the evening entertainments during the week. The full strength of the dramatic corps of the Front (including Miss Kathleen O'Neil) is brought into requisition, and the play is excellently will put on and enacted. Thus writes our correspondent, "Don Juan."

SAM DEVINE, banjoist, Irish vocalist, &c., is at present at Deagle's Varieties, St. Louis, Mo., where he can be addressed.

SIDNEY FRANKS, the London mimic, states through a card that he has been engaged for the season by J. S. McDonough for his star troupe.

AT BACON'S OPERA HOUSE, Memphis, Tenn., business is better than ever; the house is nightly crowded, and the manager appears to be as "happy as a big sun flower." The act for the better regulation of places of amusement has gone into effect, and no liquor, wine, malt liquors or cigars are sold inside of the houses, but there is no law forbidding people going next door and buying cigars and drinks, nor is there any law against the performers going into the second tier. Although the wine room may be abolished, "the game still goes on," and the getters up of the law see their jolly now, after a great deal of trouble, expense and bad blood, of trying to legislate for people's appetites. The company remain as before, with the exception of Miss Julia Robinson, Miss Nellie Edwards and Miss Ella Sheldon, whose advent has been most flattering. Miss Lottie's fine combine in favor, while Hester De Vere's songs are nightly received with much applause. J. W. Bereley, a very promising young man, whose original banjo solos and comic singing have made him quite a favorite, is at this house; if he continues to labor and improve as he has of late he will at no short period attain a high position in his profession. Gorman and Petrie, in their acts, are very amusing.....At the Varieties Theatre business is from fair to middling, as they say in the cotton market; the ladies bear off the palm in attractiveness. Miss Nellie Georgia is a favorite; she has a great deal of talent and is very industrious. Next in favor is Miss Emma Clifton, who divides the applause with Nellie. Take them together and they are a strong team and draw well. Sam Cole and Eph Horn, Jr.'s, endeavors are nightly acknowledged. Miss Lizzie Walzer is a modest dancer and a natural actress of more than ordinary talent. .....At the Palace Music Hall the lights are out, the guests are fed and the performers have vanished from the city. So writes our correspondent.

HARRY ROBINSON, musical variety artist, can be addressed care of this office.

AT WRAY'S THEATRE COMIQUE, Rochester, N. Y., on Oct. 24th, Miss Alda Wray was tendered a benefit, previous to her joining the Lew Wood's Burlesque Troupe, on which occasion the following artists volunteered their services:—Laughlin and Murray, George Wild, Cassie Gildea, Georgie Edwards, Frank Benton, Miss Lena Clark, Miss Nellie Clifford, Miss Emma Marsh, Miss Sadie Rogers, Louise Wray and Miss Emma Forsberg. Miss Ada Wray played the "Carnival of Venice," with variations, on a piccolo cornet, which was really fine. Jimmy Williams opened on the 24th. Emma Marsh, Annie Harrison and Joe Moll closed on the 26th.

WESTON'S OPERA HOUSE, Buffalo, N. Y., re-opened on Oct. 26th, under the manager ent of Weston & Lee, and the prices of admission were reduced to twenty-five and fifteen cents.

LIBBY ELLSWORTH, the dancer; Jim Hays, Dutch and Ethiopian comedian, and Mlle. Rose, dancer, constitute the fresh attraction at the Academy of Music, Nashville, Tenn. A burlesque, by Ned Bishop, called "The Seven Sisters," is announced as in preparation.

H. J. SARGENT has disposed of his interest in the Metropolitan, Indianapolis, Ind., which will, hereafter, be managed by Messrs. Leake and Dickson. Mr. Sargent has leased the National Theatre, Cincinnati, O., which he will open as a first class variety theatre on Dec. 19th. In reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that a number of artists are requested to communicate with him, as per address therein contained.

LISA WEBER has come to the conclusion to change her base of operations for this and the succeeding week, and exhibit at the Academy, Pittsburgh, instead of at the Varieties Theatre, as was previously announced. She was extensively advertised to open at the Varieties Theatre on the 30th inst., but has concluded not to do so, for some reason or other best known to herself, probably.....Business at the Varieties Theatre is at good ebb, the attractive programmes drawing full houses every evening. Cool Burgess and Charley A. Gardner have been the new acquisitions. Although Burgess gives nothing entirely new, yet his acts are neatly executed, are liberally applauded and repeatedly encored every night. C. A. Gardner does his Dutch business very cleverly. The attractions this week will be as follows:—Delehanty, Heagler & Bloodgood's Minstrels, two orchestras and two brass bands, the Dancing Blonde Sensation Troupe, the principal members of which are:—Mlle. Alexandria, Cinetop Sisters and Minnie McEigel; Carrie Augusta Moore, Skatorial Queen, and a cluster of handsome blondes. The old favorites will be led by Cool Burgess. This combination will make a big show, and a number of additional orchestra chairs will be provided for the accommodation of patrons. The Fostertroupe of Ethiopian statuettists, Marretta Troupe, Jester and Thomas Winnett. On Monday, Nov. 7th, Hernandez Foster Pantomime Troupe, Sydney Franks, Emma Alfred and eleven other artists appear at this establishment.

VARIETY ARTISTS are wanted for the Metropolitan Music Hall, Buffalo, N. Y. See the manager's address in another column.

D'ALMA, the contortionist, opens at the Adelphi Theatre, Boston, on Nov. 14th, where he can be addressed after that date.

FIRST CLASS PERFORMERS in every branch of the profession are wanted for Carroll's New Varieties, St. Louis, Mo. Address as per advertisement.

GOOD HOUSES assembled nightly last week at the Varieties Theatre, St. Louis, Mo. "Out in the Snow, or Convicted for Life," is the title of a new sensational drama, written by Frank Payne, which had its initial representation on Sunday evening, Oct. 23d. Our correspondent reports that "it is a local piece, and the different scenes are well worked up, the bridge scene, especially, being very effective. The characters in it are well portrayed. The excellent manner in which the whole piece is presented has made it quite popular, and it bids fair to have a successful run. The personation of La Belle Ida, who plays Alice Dudley, the idol, in the first act and the little street beggar in the second, deserves especial mention. This little girl has rapidly grown in favor since her first appearance here a few weeks since. This is her first attempt at playing a part, and she has demonstrated that her talents are not alone confined to song and dance or ballad singing. Mr. Hi. Chapman plays Caspar Bruman, the escaped convict, with taste. In the second act, when disguised as an English gentleman, he displays considerable ease and grace. The part of Hans Von Klutterbachen, by Mr. Frank Curtis, is the most noticeable of the male characters. The scenery has been most finely received. New acts, including Barbary Allen are on the programme for the week.....At the house of Messrs. Welsh, Hughes and White, the principal feature has been the graphic personations of Southern plantation darkies by J. W. McAndrew. One could almost imagine himself down South before the war to listen to his darkey talk. He is to again delight the audiences at the Brooklyn Opera House this week. McAndrew, who does the Dutch business well, is also on the bills for this week.

AT THE ARCH STREET OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, Simmons & Slocum's Minstrels invariably offer a rare bill of attractions, and their efforts to please meet with due reward in a steadily increasing flow of public patronage. The programme given last week was a very good one. Mr. John Crosher, in first act, sang with great sweetness and delicacy of expression the ballad of "Alone and from Home." The comic ditties and sayings of Sweatnam and Lew Simmons, the two end men, were productive of much mirth. In the second part, W. H. Price showed his vocal powers to good advantage in some burlesque operatic selections. Billy Sweatnam gave a very comical rendition of a pathetic ballad. Tommy Scully appeared in a new song and dance, "Waiting at the Gate." The amusing sketch of "The Three O'clock Train" and "The Man in Black," with Lew Simmons and Billy Sweatnam in the principal characters, were nightly hailed with screams of laughter and delight. The roaring farce of "50 Winks" concluded a most enjoyable entertainment. On Monday evening, Oct. 31st, the company will be strengthened by the addition of Hughey Dougherty, the comedian and burlesque orator, and Sheridan and Mack, the well known song and dance artists, who will appear in conjunction with the other artists in an attractive programme.

CAMPBELL, HUNTLEY AND AUSTIN'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform in Mystic, Nov. 1st; Stonington, 2d; Brand's Iron Works, 3d; Pearldale, 4th, and Westerly, R. I., 5th.

ADA TEMAN'S FEMALE MINSTRELS performed in Youngstown, O., on Oct. 24th; Akron, O., 26th; Newark, O., 28th; Zanesville, O., 31st.

DELEHANTY, HENGLER AND BLOODGOOD'S COMBINATION appeared in Youngstown, O., on Oct. 28th.

BILLY EMERSON'S MINSTRELS commenced a season of three weeks at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, Ohio, on the 24th. Our correspondent says:—"The company now playing is a re-organization for the coming campaign, and Billy is fortunate in having gathered better support than he had for some time. W. W. Hall is the treasurer; Chas. B. Griste, business manager; Geo. W. Jackson, stage manager; Charles A. Boyd, leader of orchestra, and Richard Willis, leader of brass band. Messrs. E. M. Hall and Jas. H. Budworth are the end men, both being good comiques, Hall making the banjo a specialty, and Budworth setting great store on his Dutch business and burlesque songs, such as "Lager Beer Lavelock." The Reynolds Brothers, a couple of capital cloggists, do the foot shaking, together with Fustelle, danseuse. The singing party consists of George W. Jackson, first tenor; D. Fogo, second; Con. T. Murphy, baritone; Fred. B. Naylor, alto, and John L'Estrange, basso. The instrumental force numbers eight, viz.:—C. A. Boyd, Richard Willis, L. Ciurlo, F. King, H. J. Marshall, N. Gurgui, George W. Simpson and Carl Koeniger. Besides these Senor Salcedo has been added since opening, giving a very excellent cornet solo. Biz during the week has been fine, and Emerson's songs and dances have created the same furore as in times past. The main farces have been 'The Visit,' an adaptation of the 'Widow's Victim,' and 'A Trip to Paris.'"

CARR AND KANANE'S MINSTRELS, recently organized in Chicago, Ill., under the management of Mike Kanane, the cloggist, gave two performances in Peoria, Ill., on Oct. 21st and 22d, and gave good satisfaction. The clog dancing of Kanane and West was greatly admired. In the first part Mr. Freeth was loudly encored in his song, "Our Freddie Died this Morning." Frank Pell is on the bones and West the tambourine. The company is composed of the following people:—Mike Kanane, Billy Reeves, Frank Pell, Charley Gardiner, Wm. Butler, C. H. Carter, J. W. Freeth, T. Le Strange, E. G. Kneeland, J. Withers, A. Kliest, F. G. Carter, Chas. Koehl, Jules Mertz, Fred. Schoffer and L. S. West; S. H. Case, treasurer; Phil. Dithmer, advance agent. Cal Wagner is engaged and will soon join the party.....Johnny Allen's Minstrels are billed to open at Farmington, Ill., Peoria, Nov. 1st, for two nights. So writes our correspondent, "Frank," on Oct. 25th.

WHITE AND COLE'S MINSTRELS played upon the fair ground at Helena, Ark., during the day, and in Miles' Hall at night, for five days and nights, commencing Oct. 18th.

HUGHES AND CHAPMAN, now performing with the Lisa Weber Burlesque Troupe, while in Providence, R. I., a short time since, made a change from white face to black in nine seconds, and from black to white in twenty-four.

DRAKE'S ORIGINAL GEORGIA MINSTRELS, composed of colored men, performed in Beckel Hall, Dayton, O., Oct. 29th.

NEARLY A FATAL ACCIDENT occurred to a party of Elwood's Female Minstrels on Oct. 22d. It appears that they were out sailing on the lake about twelve miles from Norwalk, O., when suddenly a flaw of wind struck the boat and upset it, and all the party came near being drowned. Eva Costello, the wapeze performer, was rescued by James Clark, the banjo player. She was supposed to be dead when brought ashore, but upon the usual restoratives being applied she revived.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS performed in Zanesville, O., Oct. 27th, and Newark, O., 28th. While this troupe was performing in Louisville, Ky., on Oct. 17th, Fred H. Napier deceased, leaving his name on the bills, and giving the management no notice. A correspondent informs us that they have introduced a new finale to their entertainment, entitled from "Ocean to Ocean," which is a descriptive mental voyage from Philadelphia to San Francisco, and quite an interesting narrative to those who have never crossed the plains. It terminates with a railroad explosion, and the festive red man rushes in and scalps his pale (?) faced brother. The future route of this troupe is Baltimore, Md., Nov. 1st, 2d and 3d; Trenton, N. J., 4th; and re-open at the Seventh Street Opera House, Philadelphia, on Monday, Nov. 7th, for the regular season.

COLE'S OPERA HOUSE, ATLANTA, GA., was opened on Oct. 21st under the management of Joe Gaylord and Joe Mack, but only remained open one night, the enterprise proving a dead failure. The company consisted of Miss Maude de Lasco, Johnny Mack, and the Davenport Brothers. So writes our correspondent "Eagle Eye" on Oct. 26th.

HARRY MACCARTHY'S EXCELSIOR MINSTRELS commenced a series of four performances in Savannah, Ga., on Oct. 26th.

WILLIAM H. BARBER, formerly a member of the Starlight Serenaders, died in Rochester, N. Y., on Oct. 24th, of consumption. He had appeared at several concerts, and was well known among musical people.

THE GROSS RECEIPTS of Simmons and Slocum's Minstrels, Philadelphia, for the month of September, were $13,616; Carncross and Dixey's, for the same month, were $6,058.

JOHNNY ALLEN'S MINSTRELS performed in Omaha, N. T., on Oct. 24th and 25th.

THE MORRIS BROTHERS MINSTRELS are billed to perform in New Haven, Conn., on Nov. 5th.

HUGHEY HAGERTY, Dutch song and dance man and general performer, advertises that he can be engaged.

CHRISTY AND HALLETT'S MINSTRELS are billed for Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 2d and 3d; Tonawanda, 4th; Lockport, 5th and 6th; Lua Bridge, 7th; Toronto, Canada, 8th and 9th; Hamilton, 10th and 11th; St. Catherines, 12th and 13th; Batavia, N. Y., 14th, and Rochester, 15th and 16th.

AT CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS, Philadelphia, in the first part, last week, J. L. Carncross sang the ballad, "Katy Darling," and J. G. Russell sang the "Heart Bowed Down," and was nightly rewarded with a deserved encore. In the olio, Frank Morgan and Harry Leslie convulsed the audience with laughter by their comic acting in a new sketch entitled "Dr. Schenck's Syrup." Bobby Newcomb sang and danced the "Big Sun Flower," and Masters Joseph and Eddie, and Charles Gibbons, danced a triple clog hornpipe. The entertainment concluded with the amusing burlesque entitled "M'lle Nilsson," which will be played this week, in addition to an almost new programme, including the acts of the "African Brothers," "Kome and Kiss Me," "Father Gould Charcoal," and Messrs. Carncross and Russell will sing the "Larboard Watch."

Circuses.

CAMPBELL'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS is billed to exhibit in Doylestown, Pa., Nov. 1st; Newtown 2d, and Bristol 3d.

DAN CASTELLO'S CIRCUS is traveling in Minnesota, and exhibited on Oct. 27th at Winona, and a correspondent informs us that this is the only circus that has visited that town this season.

VAN AMBURGH'S MENAGERIE, Henry Barnum, manager, exhibited in Belleville, O., on Oct. 21st. About the middle of the performance a sudden gust of wind, accompanied by rain, came on, and the tent was tossed about in a frightful manner. The audience becoming alarmed, rushed from their seats in every direction. The manager immediately gave orders to lower the centre of the tent, and the showmen immediately sprung to the ropes; but the wind proved too strong for them, the chains and ropes on one side were broken and the immense tent was lifted several feet high and carried over the heads of the people, and fell upon the east side of the lot. The lights were extinguished and utter darkness prevailed. The large centre poles and the smaller side poles were dragged by the ropes through the crowd of people, maiming quite a number of them. The lion's cage was caught by the ropes and overturned upon Prof. Langworthy, the lion tamer, seriously injuring him.
